THE SEWING MACHINE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY "HER."

"Got one? Don't say so! Which did you get?
One of the kind to open and shut?
Own it or hire it? How much did you pay?
Does it go with a crank or treadle? Say.
I'm a single man and somewhat green,
Tell me about your Sewing Machine."

"Listen, my boy, and hear all about it—
I don't know what I could do without it;
I've owned it now for more than a year,
And like it so well, I evil it 'my dear.'
'Tis the cleverest thing that ever was seen,
This wonderful family Sewing Machine.

"It's none of your angular Wheeler things,
With steel shod beak and cast iron wings,
Its work would bother a hundred of His,
And worth a Thousand, indeed it is;
And has a way—you needn't stare—
Of combing and braiding his own black hair.

"Mine is not one of those stupid affairs
That stand in the corner with what-nots and chairs,
And make that dismal head-achy noise,
Which all the comfort of sewing destroys;
Nor rigid contrivance of lumber and steel,
But one with a natural spring in the heel.

"Mine is one of the kind to love,
And wear a shawl and a soft kid glove;
Has the merriest eyes, and a dainty foot,
And sports the charming gaiter boot;
And a bonnet with feathers, and ribbons, and loops,
With any indefinite number of hoops.

"None of your patent machines for me,
Unless dame nature's the patentee:
I like the sort that can laugh and talk,
And take my arm for an evening walk,
That will do whatever the owner may choose
With the slightest perceptible turn of the screws.

"One that can dance, and—possibly—flirt,
And make a pudding as well as a shirt,
One that can sing without dropping a stitch,
And play the housewife, lady or witch;
Ready to give the sweet advice,
And do up your collars and things so nice.

"What do you think of my Sewing Machine?
Ain't it the best that ever was seen?
'Fian't a clumsy mechanical toy,
But flesh and blood! Hear that, my boy?
With a turn for gossip and household affairs.
Which includes, you know, the sewing of tears."

CHAPTER I.

O WOMAN! WOMAN!

"Oh! Harold, Harold! I am so glad you have come. You are so late and I—poor Rose—have been standing at the window, waiting and watching so long!"

And the speaker, a robust, beautiful peasant girl, threw her arms round the man she welcomed so warmly and looked up in his face, waiting anxiously for his excuse as she had waited only a few minutes for him.

Harold Grantley, eldest and handsomest of Theodore Grantley's two sons, bent his fine head and pressed his lips to the beautiful ones of the girl before he spoke. Is not a kiss the best answer to give a woman? then he said:—

"And I, Rose, have been as anxious to come as you have been to see me—aye, and more so, little one—for we men always love better than you women (don't interrupt me, darling, I know you'd deny it! There, kiss me instead) and are less patient at a separation. But there, somehow the Fates don't seem to shine very propitiously upon this love of ours; there is always something in the way that stops my path to you. This morning I had on my hat three times and was pulled up short each time; I am afraid, little one, that I pulled up short myself the last time. I had dodged that confounded butler of ours, sneaked round at the back and had my hand on the wall to leap it when young St. Aubyn's dark face popped up on the other side——"

As the name escaped his lips the girl shuddered.

"What is the matter, Rose?" asked her lover, drawing her closer to his breast.

"No—thing," replied the girl, hesitatingly, then as he asked anxiously:—

"Are you cold, my darling?" and literally lifted her in his strong young arms to the fire, she murmured:—

"I am afraid of Arnold St. Aubyn! I have a sort of presentiment—oh, don't laugh, Harold!—that—that—I—I don't know!"

"I thought not," replied the lover, laughing gently, but folding his arms still more tightly round her, "I thought not! St. Aubyn is a very decent fellow, very; a little cold and reserved, perhaps, but a very decent fellow. He and I are very good friends, I assure you——" again the girl shuddered, "and he only this morning asked me to go out and have a pop or two at the rooks—why what on earth are you turning so white for?" he broke off to exclaim, turning up her face with his gentle hands and regarding its pallor with astonishment.

"Nothing, nothing," murmured the girl, brokenly; then, as he bent and kissed her, she broke out into a wail, and these words:—"Oh! Harold, Harold! don't laugh at me, but I have had such a dreadful dream!" And she got her face out of his hands and pressed it against his breast, as if to shut out some horrible vision. "Harold, I dreamt I saw you lying at my feet, dead, with a round mark on your breast, just here, and a——a——pool of blood at your side! You said—he—he asked you to go a-shooting with him? Oh, merciful heaven! don't go, Harold, Harold!"

And her voice grew thick and hoarse, as she clung to him in an agony of apprehension.

"Nonsense, my child!" said Harold, soothingly, stroking her silky hair with a gentle, caressing hand. "All idle dreams, Rose, only idle dreams! You are too much alone here, too much a child, darling! if I could only take you away from this dull cottage, take you to live with me—to be always with me—my own, my wife; you would have no more fearful dreams! but I cannot."

The girl smiled patiently and raised his hand to her lips.

"Ah, you are so good, Harold! I do not fear for myself, but for you. If Mr. Grantley knew you—you loved me, and wanted to make me your wife, I—I think he would kill me, he is so stern, and I know that he wants you to marry a rich wife."

"That's true about the rich wife, Rose, darling, and so I shall when I marry you, for you are rich in every virtue, and a good, dear little darling."

And the man poured a shower of kisses on her red lips. Then the two sat down by the fire, and with their hands entwined, talked as lovers will talk, soft, sweet nothings that are ridiculous in their subtimity. Harold Grantley was sitting with his back towards the low window, with his arm round his mistress' waist; the girl, leaning her head against his shoulder, was listening with closed eyes to his plans and prospects, all tending to the one desired end, his marrying her, when suddenly opening her eyes and glancing at the window, she uttered a piercing shriek. With a cry of astonishment, Harold sprang to his feet and looked in the direction her quivering hand pointed. Then he saw the cause of her alarm; there, at the window, shutting out the light, was a man's face, a dark, stern, wrathful face, with two flashing eyes fixed upon the pair inside the cottage.

"Hush, Rose," said Harold, re-assuringly. "It is only St. Aubyn."

The next moment the door was thrown violently open and the tall, well-made figure of St. Aubyn strode in. Standing in the light of the winter sun, as it poured through the open doorway, his arms folded across his chest and his dark face disturbed with a suppressed passion, he filled the girl with a world of terror, and she clung to Harold Grantley, and hid her face upon his arm.

For a moment the two men regarded each other in deadly silence; already the antagonism of hate and jealousy was working in the breast of both, and each saw the words, "Thine enemy!" written on the other's face. Then St. Aubyn spoke, his voice ringing deep and clear with a fierce scorn:—

"So, Mr. Grantley, this is the road to Dudley, where you told me you were going! No wonder you were so anxious to be rid of me this morning, and I can easily believe the business you spoke of was important! May I ask if Mr. Theodore Grantley approves of the close intimacy established between his laborer's daughter and his eldest son?"

"Ask nothing, Lord St. Aubyn! but attend to your own affairs. How dare you talk to me in this way! Leave the house, sir, or by heaven I'll throw you out!" And he advanced half a step, but was held back by the girl who, white with terror, clung, like ivy to an oak, round his waist.

"It is the business of every man to save an innocent woman, and it is my business to protect this poor girl, from your ruinous advances! Be calm, sir," he added, with a ugly sneer, as Harold stepped forward in a threatening attitude, his handsome face flushed with indignation.

"Lord St. Aubyn, you shall answer for this!" he exclaimed, "but lest you should imagine yourself right in your vile suspicion, hear me swear that I love this girl truly and devotedly, and will make her my wife!"

"You swear it!" retorted St. Aubyn, "you, why you lied to me this morning, and you lie now!"

Scarcely were the words clear from his livid lips, when Harold Grantley had dealt him a blow that sent him staggering against the wall. The girl shrieked fearfully and sprang between the two.

"Oh, Harold, Harold! don't strike him, he is mad, mad! My lord, it is quite true, he does love me, and will marry me, and I love him!"

As she spoke the last words, St. Aubyn turned crimson and winced as if he had been struck.

"He lies!" he shouted, hoarsely, "he knows he cannot marry you—the estates are mortgaged to the neck; his father will never permit it—it is impossible, and he knows it. Girl, girl! I love you too well to see you betrayed. Throw him off before it is too late!"

Carried away by his passion, the young lord seized her by the arm and would have drawn her towards him, but the girl struggled and threw herself upon Harold Grantley's heart.

"Oh, go away, my lord!" she cried, "I love him—love him dearly. Have I not told you so before—often!"

"What! has he dared to speak to you—"

And Harold advanced threateningly, with his strong arm uplifted.

St. Aubyn turned to him, his dark face set and cold as marble.

"He did not add another blow, Harold Grantley. If I have spoken falsely, it will be well for Rose Darleigh, and if truly—"

No need to finish the sentence, his bitter sneer as he turned towards the door was significant enough.

With his hand upon the latch he turned, his eyes lit up with a fierce hatred, he spoke again—

"I await you outside, Harold Grantley; you must answer to me for this blow!"

CHAPTER II.

ON THE SANDS.

A wild night; the bitter east wind blew the sleet and snow in a cutting storm across the Calais sands and through the narrow streets of the old town. The tide was at its ebb, and the small waves were sweeping backwards and forwards with a low, angry, threatening noise that was a forewarning of the sea's might, when, three hours later, it should dash and break at the rocks and shingles high up upon the beach. It was a night when men would naturally shun the bitter weather and keep close within doors. Yet a group of four men was standing against the log-pile driven into the damp sands as a beacon or holdfast.

Wrapped round in their heavy cloaks, two of them whispering mysteriously, and the other two standing a little apart in unbroken silence; the group bore a mysterious look that was heightened by the cutting storm and the sullen plash of the ever moving water.

"What are we to do?" said one of the two men who had been whispering, and whose name was Gardner.

"Morton says that we may have to wait half an hour before the clouds break and the moon shows."

"I can wait," replied the man he addressed, sternly.

"And I am as patient as Lord St. Aubyn," said the other, whom the reader will recognize as Harold Grantley.

Gardner shrugged his shoulders, and walked back to the other second—Morton.

"They are as determined as ever," he growled. "To see St. Aubyn's face, one would think he had made up his mind to bring young Harold down."

"Well, I wish they'd be quick about it," replied the other, "for I don't half like it. It's such a devil of a night," he added, shuddering.

Then the two seconds joined the principals at the log pile, and standing silently, waited the appearance of the moon that was to shed its peaceful light to illumine a deed of death.

At last, a bright stream of silver poured down upon the bare, chilling sands and on the group of watchers.

With a quick movement the two seconds unlocked a mahogany case lying on the ground and produced a pair of pistols. At the click of the lock St. Aubyn started eagerly forward and placed himself in position. All through the dreadful scene he moved with an impatience that was horrible in its eagerness.

"Are you ready?" asked Morton, stepping up to Harold Grantley.

"Yes, quite," was the instant reply, and the ground was measured out in solemn silence.

Then, face to face, for life or death, the two men stood, the light of the moon gleaming on the pistol barrels.

"Once, twice, thrice;" the handkerchief dropped, two reports rang out upon the air, and Harold Grantley sprang into the air to fall full length upon the dreary sands.

Both seconds rushed up, followed by St. Aubyn, still holding his smoking pistol in his hand.

As Morton slightly raised the prostrate man, all there saw the round hole in the heart from which poured Harold Grantley's life blood.

"My God! mortal!" was all Gardner said, while he vainly endeavored to staunch the blood.

There they knelt and stood, the dark face of the slayer glowering down upon the slain.

Three minutes passed, St. Aubyn moved never an inch, but still, with folded arms, regarding the face of his slaughtered rival.

His presence annoyed the two men, and one—Morton—looked up with undisguised horror at the cold, triumphant face, and said:—

"Had you not better fly, my lord? There is danger here."

"Is he dead?" was the hoarse reply.

"Not yet, thank God!" answered the other, putting his ear to the mouth of the dying man.

"I will wait for the end," was the rejoinder. "I will wait for the end."

At the metallic tones of his voice Harold Grantley opened his eyes. Death was standing at his head, waiting only for the moment to stretch forth his long, all-powerful arm, and claim him for his own. Yet the dying man's voice was clear and intelligible as he said:—

"Yes, wait for the end, it is not very far off, Lord St. Aubyn. You have kept your word, and washed out the blow—but this night's work shall remain with you for ever—aye, even to your end! you have taken my life and wrecked hers, but your own shall be cursed from this night. Lord St. Aubyn, you fired before the last word! It is murder, not satisfaction, and you are an assassin!"

The voice grew weak and thin—Death drew nearer—and the white, quivering hand, that pointed accusingly at the still form towering above, fell powerlessly.

Not a muscle of St. Aubyn's face moved, but the close locked lip and glittering eyes were fixed intently on the white face beneath. Then a shudder ran through the dying man's frame and his eyes opened again.

"It's very cold, Morton—good-bye—Who, who is that standing there. Ah, it is you!—Remember, with my last breath I curse you! * * * Rose! Rose! poor Rose!"

* * * * * * *

Two hours later the threatening waves flowed over the white face, and bathed the wounded heart, then the sea caught dead Harold Grantley tenderly in her arms, and bore him to his resting place beneath its ever-moving surface.

CHAPTER III.

FRIEND OR FOE.

Leonard Grantley was an artist. Not an artist whose pictures hang in the places of honor at the Academy, and sell for prices fabulous and extraordinary, nor an artist with a well filled pocket, a studio resplendent with claret velvet, and pictures the admiration of toady friends and the butts whereon a thousand critics love to stick their venomed shafts. No monied amateur was Leonard, nor, unfortunately for him, was he a public favorite; he was only an unknown laborer, ever occupied in painting pot boilers for his daily bread, with, perhaps, as a luxury, one large picture every now and then for some dimly lighted corner of the Academy.

A gentleman was Leonard Grantley as well as an artist. Standing before his easel, dressed in an old, threadbare velvet coat, that showed off his well proportioned figure and strong, elegantly formed limbs, he looked every inch a Nature's nobleman. Leonard Grantley, although poor in the "root of all evil," was rich in blood, and the old nobility showed itself in the turn of his head, and the clear, clean cutting of the lips, as well as in the white well formed hand. His hair, long, of course, as an artist's should be, was of a soft, silken brown, and fell in a rippling wave away from his white forehead behind his ears, and in a mass of tangle upon the collar of his coat. Dark brown eyes, that had a habit of smiling pleasantly when he was pleased, and clouding darkly when he was angry, and eyebrows that were dark and silken completed his portrait as far as so imperfect a limner as I can paint it.

His studio consisted of a room in Walner street, which, every one knows, is within easy distance of Hyde Park. An old room, with dark oak pannelings and heavy frescoed ceiling, a large fireplace on one side with carved armorial bearings, the sharp surfaces of which were worn smooth by the fingers of Father Time, and half a dozen busts and lay figures on the other. Rough sketches or studies hung on the best lighted side of the room, and a suit of steel armor glittered in the far corner. Brushes, palettes and colors were scattered about on the old oak chairs and table, and from ten to fifteen meerschaum and other pipes of every conceivable variety and shape were lying on the mantel shelf.

It was a glorious spring morning and the sun streamed through the window and tinged the artist's hair with gold as he stood before his easel.

The picture was the academy one; it was to make the name of Leonard Grantley famous; at least so hoped its author, and he worked at it with a pleasure he scarcely ever felt over the commonplace little pictures of dairy maids and children which gained him his daily bread, meat, pudding and clothes. The subject was "The Death of Cæsar," and Leonard, as he scumbled in his foreground with flake white and vandyke brown, murmured:—

"Twenty pounds—twenty pounds!" here he shook his head impatiently. "Twenty left to last until Miladi Macbeth is sold, and that is fixing the enormous sum of money's limits of endurance at a very indefinite period. "Twenty pounds!" he repeated again, "ten pounds for rent, five pounds for Snarl, the tailor, a sovereign for canvas and paint, and four pounds remain for you, Leonard Grantley, to live and be merry on and—die."

And here he broke off, and laying down his mal stick walked to the end of the room, uncovered a small picture that had rested with its face to the wall and gazed anxiously at the painting.

Starting from the canvas, with a life like expression, were a face and figure startling in their intensity of fierce passion. The face, white and drawn, was filled with a world of determination, the thin lips were pressed tightly, almost painfully, over the teeth, and the eyes glittered with the fire of hate, murder and the avaricious lust of ambition.

One hand, small and white, clenched so tightly that the blue veins showed clearly through the white skin, was pressed against her bosom, while the other grasped the hilt of a dagger, grasped it ready and eager to strike; and one could almost fancy, after looking at the picture for a moment, that the hand would rise and the dagger be thrust—somewhere, anywhere—so that it did the murder that was written upon every feature of the fearful face and cried out from the heaving bosom and clenched hand.

With a sigh, Leonard Grantley turned the picture to the wall again and returned to his work.

"It is terrible, too terrible!" he muttered. "It makes my blood run chill, though I created it. Yet it seems to me the very ideal of Lady Macbeth; strange they did not hang it, stranger still no one will buy it!" For a few moments he worked away at the Roman Senators, but only for a few minutes. Throwing the brushes on the table with a sigh, he exclaimed:—"No use, I have no heart for it this morning, I think too much to work well. Try a pipe, Leonard, try a pipe!" and selecting a meerschaum he walked to the window, and leaning against the side with his back to the door, was soon weaving white wreaths of smoke and filling the room with the odor of the cavendish that was smouldering in that "man's great composer," his pipe. Between the puffs Leonard, who had from constant solitude got into the habit of communing with himself in half audible tones, muttered as the years, some long and some short, you have lived in this room, Leonard Grantley, lived and worked, lived from hand—or rather from easel—to mouth. Very little pleasure and a great deal of boredom, a maximum of work and a minimum of money. Seriously, Leonard Grantley, is this life of yours worth living? Wouldn't it be better, don't you think, to forget the old name and turn ploughman or farm laborer down Essex, and not live without a care for food, clothes, or raiment, or the dread 'to-morrow?' Seriously again, Leonard Grantley, you don't live, you exist. Life hasn't begun for you; the five years have been years of childhood, in fancy, sleep, anything but life. And I fear, very much fear, Leonard Grantley, that you never will begin to live—and the artist shook his mass of hair and relapsed into a smoke dream.

Had he but known that the footsteps coming up the old, wormeaten stairs, the footsteps which he could not hear through the thick oaken door, were bringing him the life he coveted, with its few joys and many sorrows, its thousand glitters and shams, its hollow laughter and bitter heart aches, its wearisome toil and restless, feverish repose, would he have been glad or sorry, would his cheeks have paled at its terrors or flushed at its flotillous, short lived joys?

"Come in," he responded to the quick knock at the door. "Bolton, I suppose," he muttered, without turning his head.

Bolton was the picture dealer who sold his little pot boilers and chubby cheeked children.

The door was opened softly and the visitor entered. He was a gentleman one could see by a glance at the pale face with its black, glittering eyes and heavy, well trimmed moustache covering the thin lips.

Dressed in the height of fashion, and with scrupulous elegance, bringing into the room with him a faint, pleasant odor of perfume, the visitor stood for a moment, taking in at a glance every particular of the room and its unconscious inmate.

Still with his back to the door, looking through the window, Leonard Grantley said:—

"Well, Bolton, what success? have you sold the last daub?"

"My name is not Bolton," came the reply in a soft and musical voice, "but Garton—Raymond Garton."

Leonard Grantley turned round quickly.

"I beg your pardon," he said, advancing pipe in hand. "I have so few visitors that I imagined your knock belonged to a picture dealer who has frequent business with me."

"No excuse, I pray," was the courteous reply, accompanied by a well bred, polished smile. "The fau't was mine; your servant wished to announce me, but I told her I would find my way up. Your picturesque stairs guided me."

There was no answer required, so Leonard bowed slightly and dragged forward a chair.

"Will you be seated?" he said.

"Thanks, no," replied the visitor. "I have come on a matter of business for one part, on pleasure for the other. I will not take your valuable time up, my dear sir," he continued, "so will announce my errand at once. Mr. Bolton, the picture dealer you mentioned, spoke to me of a small picture of yours—Lady Macbeth—and spoke so highly of it that my curiosity was aroused. I am a lover of your art, my dear Mr. Grantley—a most devoted lover, and I flatter myself am somewhat of a judge of color and form. Will you show me your picture?"

Leonard, standing with one arm leaning on the mantelshelf, listening to the smooth, soft tones, some way or other could not help thinking of a cat purring and singing, with claws sheathed in velvet, and eyes softened and hidden, but with both claws and eyes ready to wound or blind at a second's notice.

"Certainly," he replied, lifting the picture from the corner and handing it to his visitor.

Raymond Garton carried it to the light, and for a few moments examined it with critical eyes, then he turned to the artist.

"My dear sir, this picture is a marvel. It is not a picture, it is a living woman. Do you say they refused to hang it? They must have been blind. It is superb—superb—superb." And once more the dark, glittering, living eyes were fixed upon the dark, dead eyes on the canvas.

"It is unsold, I think Mr. Bolton told me?" he said after waking toward Leonard Grantley, with the picture in his hand.

"Yes," replied the artist, with something like a sigh; "I am sorry to say, that Lady Macbeth is my property still, and likely a great while to remain so."

"Not if I can help it," retorted Raymond Garton.

"May I ask the price you have put upon her ladyship?"

"None," replied Leonard. "I never put a price upon my pictures; Mr. Bolton——"

"Mr. Bolton, if you will pardon me saying so, is no judge of a work of his kind."

"That may be," answered Leonard, re-filling his pipe, "but still he peruses everything I paint."

"Poor and proud," muttered Raymond Garton; then aloud, "Will you permit me to price this for you?"

"Certainly, if you wish to purchase it," replied Leonard.

Do what he would he could not overcome a sort of antipathy he had formed to his handsome, well-dressed, soft spoken visitor; and amused to the world's polite mask, his words came rather curtly—they seemed very curt, indeed, in contrast to the amiable, even tones of his visitor.

"This picture is worth, my dear sir, six hundred pounds, and if you will permit me, I will become its owner at that price."

"Six hundred pounds is too much," said Leonard, startled for the moment out of his equanimity.

With a quick eye Raymond Garton noticed the start, and hastened to follow up his advantage.

"Mr. Grantley, it has been a favorite theory of mine that an artist is a bad judge of the monetary value of his own pictures. I often find that a painter will sell me a gem, a master piece, for less money than he will part with an inferior picture which he has taken a fancy to himself and thinks possessed of qualities which exist only in his own imagination. This is a case in point. This picture is a gem. I do not hesitate to tell you so, and I do not doubt that, had it a fair chance, it would sell for more than six hundred pounds, considerably more. I take you at a disadvantage really when I offer you the sum I have named."

For a moment Leonard hesitated, watching the wreaths of smoke as they rose from his pipe, and wondering whether this man could be a millionaire, that he should be able to offer an unknown artist nearly a thousand pounds for four feet of canvas which every one else had refused.

"You may be right about its value," he said, presently, "I think you are wrong, but if Bolton does not think it too much, Lady Macbeth is yours."

"I thank you," replied the visitor. "And now we have slain our business permit me to commence my errand of pleasure."

The artist bowed, still lounging against the oaken mantelpiece, his handsome face turned towards his visitor.

"Will you not sit down," he said, "I am sorry I cannot offer you a cigar, but I am too poor to smoke them myself, and so——"

"You are very kind," replied the purchaser of Lady Macbeth. "I fancy I have a cigar, if you will allow me, I will light it. Let me offer you one, they are good, I think."

And he held out a handsomely ornamented cigar case.

"No, thanks," said Leonard, "I always smoke a pipe indoors."

With great care the elegant Mr. Garton lit his weed and seated himself comfortably in a chair.

"First, Mr. Grantley, let me say that your name is not unfamiliar to me—I knew, or rather have heard of the Grantleys of Norfolk, and if you are of that family, can almost claim you as an acquaintance.

"I am the only remaining member of the Grantleys of Dene, Norfolk," said Leonard, gravely.

"You will pardon me," said Mr. Garton, "but I thought so. I have a small place near Dene, where I never live, though, and Grantley Manor was ever a source of admiration to me. It is a splendid old——"

"Ruin," interrupted Leonard, rather curtly.

"Scarcely a ruin, my dear sir," rejoined Mr. Garton—"scarcely a ruin; the place has been shut up some time, I think, and has run to seed a little only; a few thousand pounds laid out would restore it to all its former grandeur and nobility."

"Were it a matter of a few thousand pence, I could not find them to do it with," said Leonard, slowly, adding, calmly, as if he were speaking of some one else, "I am poor, sir, very poor."

"I beg your pardon, I really beg your pardon," said the other earnestly and eagerly, "for touching upon such a subject. Ignorance is my only excuse, but I beg you will forgive me."

"Pray don't apologise," replied Leonard, calmly, as before. "The fact of my poverty is pretty evident," glancing around the room with a slight smile. "I merely put into words what the slowest of observers would have discovered by a glance." Mr. Garton murmured some further excuse softly, and then smoked silently for a few moments. "I think I mentioned that my name was Garton—Raymond Garton—Grantley. Let me give you my card. St. John's Wood is no great distance from here; will you do me the honor of a visit? Next Thursday, I shall have, I think, rather a pleasant gathering, a set of men who will amuse you—well known literary monstrosities, a few musicians, and a sprinkling of ladies. By the way, Mr. Grantley, I must tell you that I was commissioned to purchase your Lady Macbeth by my ward, Miss Lillian Garton. She is staying with my mother, who keeps house for me. My ward is a greater lover of your noble art than even myself, if that were possible. She will be delighted—charmed—with your picture, I feel assured. But, pardon me, I am straying from my subject. You will come next Thursday. My mother will send you a formal invitation, but I thought it better to ask you—nay more, to exact a 'yes'—while I am here."

All this was said in the soft, pleasing voice, that was like the humming of some bird, and stole over one's senses like an Oriental perfume.

As he waited for Leonard's answer, he rose and fixed his glittering eyes upon the handsome, hesitating face of the young artist.

Ah, Leonard Grantley! if you had known how much depended on your reply, would you have answered:—"Thanks, yes, I will come," so carelessly?

"I am delighted," said Mr. Garton. "Remember, 8 o'clock. Good bye."

And he held out his hand. What made Leonard Grantley think, as he took the proffered hand, of the cat's velvet claw again?

With another smiling adieu Mr. Garton stepped lightly down the stairs. Once as he reached the curve of the staircase, he turned, and fastening his glistening eyes upon the artist's door, he muttered:—

"The very man! Leonard Grantley, you were made for me. Made for me!"

ON SILVER WINGS.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "JOYCE DORMER'S" STORY.

CHAPTER I.

AN UNEXPECTED ALLY.

Diana, waking after her night of fitful slumber, her dreams half spent in regions of happiness and half in regions of despair, came at once to the remembrance of what had taken place on the previous evening.

It was too strongly impressed upon her mind for her to have the slightest doubt concerning her impressions—nay, she had even been unconsciously arranging her plans during the night. Her brain had worked on, despite the sleep that had laid her other senses to rest, and the first words she said to herself were:—

"There is something definite to go upon; the Signorina will advise me now."

And on the whole—though she knew that John Carteret, through his marriage, was now separated from her forever—she felt more contented, more settled, stronger, more hopeful of the future than she had done since her engagement to Jasper.

"I did not love him as I ought to have done. I was only trying to do right," she said; "and this is just one of those seeming accidents that mould one's path, and send one straight, and show one what to do. Nothing happens by chance."

And then she fell into a reverie—for the thought brought up much that John Carteret had said to her.

"Every life planned," she murmured; "every hair of your head numbered. Not a sparrow falls to the ground unnoticed. Complete and minute supervision. In the millions and millions of human beings, each life isolated and individual—a perfect life in itself, fully chaptered out, fully recognised, fully dealt with. No massing together, no human distinctions made; each a soul, as important as all other souls, struggling its way through the world man thinks so great, so all important, to the greater after world he often thinks so lightly of."

She ended to breakfast. Mrs. Seaton was not common. She seldom did come.

"Mrs. Seaton had sent to see if there were any letters for her," said the butler.

"One, Smith."

Then Diana turned to look at her own three. One from Jasper, which she opened first. He would be at home in less than a week; by that time, he hoped that everything would be completed. And then he entered into a long description of the beauties of the coast scenery.

Diana tossed it aside with a half contemptuous laugh. She should never go there. Her old antagonism was rising. She was beginning to hate Jasper; and yet throughout the letter there breathed forth such a pathos of passionate love that the laugh ended in a half-sigh, and she said:—

"Poor Jasper—I suppose he likes me."

Then she took up one of the other letters, and looked for a moment at the address; it was in a hand she did not recognise. She looked at the post-mark—Marchington; and she wondered who could be writing to her from Marchington. It was a lady's hand. It must be some one whom she had met with when she was abroad. And without much feeling of interest, she opened it.

John Carteret's writing! A few hurried lines, a short farewell letter, at the head of which was written, "To be sent after my death."

After death!

She trembled so violently that the letter fell from her hand, the blood in her veins seemed to cease flowing, and her heart scarcely seemed to beat. She sat speechless—senseless almost—for the blow was so terrible.

Dead! And he had loved her to the last.

Dead! Not married!

She could not understand. How should she? The letter told her nothing. Not one word of explanation. It simply brought the fact before her that he was dead, that his last thought had been of her, that he had loved her truly to the end. And now it was over!

She sat there in her misery—not moving, scarcely breathing—with no power to utter one single moan to relieve her overcharged heart. Her eyes were fixed in vacant horror on the fallen letter, which she was too much stupefied to pick up. Its envelope, however, still lay on the table beside the remaining letter. And all at once, raising her eyes, she saw it, and it struck her that the handwriting was the same. And, looking closer, she perceived that "Open this first" was written upon it. It might give her some information. And yet, what information could it give her but the account of his death?

It was a long time before she could summon up sufficient courage to look into it, and then she was afraid to read the sorrowful record that she knew she should find there. It was a long letter, and she turned to the signature.

"Alice Carteret!"

His sister! The girl she had seen at Thale. She covered her face with her hands and tried to nerve herself to read the letter.

At length she began; and, as she read, her face grew brighter—her eyes eagerly devoured the contents—she hurried on—she read to the end. She paused, breathless and burst into a passion of weeping.

Not dead! Thank God, not dead!—though very ill. There might be time. If she could see him once again before he died!

"By accident! The letter came by accident," his sister said.

No accident, Diana knew; but the sequel to the paper she had found the evening before.

She gathered up her letters; and before many minutes had elapsed was on her way to the Neris' cottage.

The Neris were early people; their matins had been over long ago. Signor Neri was away at the organ and Signora Neri was seated by the fireside, working at some beautiful embroidery she had learned to do among the nuns abroad.

"What is it, carissima?" she asked, as Diana flew into the room, throwing herself down beside her friend, and, after vainly trying to make her quivering lips frame the words she wished to speak, burst into tears, and sobbed so vehemently that Signora Neri was alarmed, and wondered what fresh trouble had happened to her. But she said nothing. She gently unfastened her mantle and took off her hat; and then she stroked her hair soothingly, whilst fresh bursts of sobbing prevented Diana from yet speaking. At last she grew calmer and calmer; and then she drew her letters forth and said:—

"Read—read!" and she hid her face in the folds of Signora Neri's dress.

And Signora Neri read; and, as she did so, the color mounted to her brow.

"I was right," she muttered to herself; "there was treachery somewhere. Giuseppe was right. The spirits of the Sybil was aroused in a foreign land. The colder hearts of the north judge not as we of warm and fiery blood. Povarina carina!—carina!" she said aloud. "What can I do for thee?"

"Signora I must go to him," said Diana, springing up. "I must go to him. May I not?" she asked, imploringly.

"Surely, carina—who would forbid thee?"

"Mrs. Seaton—every one—every one but you. But I must go. There is no time to lose. You must tell me, Signora—you are older—you know more of life than I do. He would not think I should not come. He loves me still. Signora, shall I not go and see him once, when he is dying, Signora—dying!"

"Thou shalt go, poor child! Giuseppe and I will go with thee," answered Signora Neri. "None shall prevent thee."

And the quick Italian blood rose in the pale face, and Signora Neri felt the glow of youth come upon her in her fervent sympathy with Diana. Ah! could it have been only so with Ercolo and herself, what a life consolation it would have been. If she had only heard him breathe once more "Orsola!" with his dying lips, she would have heard it still vibrating, like an angel whisper, calling her to another world. But Ercolo had been married and John Carteret was not.

And so John Carteret was true and Jasper Seaton was false. She understood not how it had been yet—that was at present incomprehensible. But she felt that Our Lady of the Sorrowful Heart had taken heed to the many prayers she had offered in Diana's behalf, though the answer was so sad a one.

"Carissima," she said, "the Good Shepherd hath pity on His sheep. He will lead thee tenderly. Our Lady hath heard me."

Diana, however, scarcely heeded the whispered comfort. Her heart was full of one thought only; she should see John Carteret once more; should speak to him and hear him speak once more. The pent up feelings that she had restrained through the strong principle that he had implanted in her soul had burst their bounds; the barriers of endurance that she had upbuilt were broken down. They had done their work—they had been strong walls about her soul—they had kept the wings that bore her onward uncrushed, uninjured; but now the time of waiting was at an end, the time of patient endurance over, the time for action had come. Another epoch of her life was ended, a cycle of suffering completed; perhaps only to give place to a still greater one.

And now for action.

She had traveled very little in England. She knew nothing of lines, and trains and distances; and Signora Neri knew still less.

"Giuseppe will tell us. He will be at home soon."

But Diana was too restless to wait. She would go to the station and make all inquiries and they would start by the first train; and she left Signora Neri, promising to be back again without delay.

"But the station is far—thou wilt be weary."

"I could fly," returned Diana. "I can feel no fatigue."

"Our Lady be blessed for ever," ejaculated Signora Neri, as Diana disappeared. Ave Maria! who had not been unmindful of my supplications for my darling. The truth is brought to life in spite of falseness. The enemy shall not triumph. Nay, Giuseppe, who had the keener sense, thou or I? And yet thy music told thee true—the child's heart is with her lover still and hath been; and her soul's anguish hath been greater than I have reckoned. Now may all be well; and, in the last farewell, may the great peace that re-united souls shall know in Paradise, overshadow the wrongly parted ones."

Diana sped along, pale, agitated, yet full of sudden determination that would have surprised even Jasper Seaton, well as he knew her. She was so absorbed that she did not notice the tall figure that, with stately step, approached her.

"Diana!"

And Diana found herself face to face with Miss Pyecroft. She had not seen her for a long time; there had been a mutual feeling of uncomfortableness, though perhaps neither could have satisfactorily accounted for it. But to-day Miss Pyecroft involuntarily stopped—for the look of distress, almost of agony, on the girl's face startled her. It was too real to pass unnoticed, and a throb of something more weak minded than might have been expected from Miss Pyecroft's rigid exterior moved her heart. It was the first time that she had ever felt a sentiment of anything like pity for Diana, and, in spite of herself, this softer feeling took possession of her. She had never liked Jasper Seaton, and, by some strange intuition, Diana's visible emotion in some way connected itself with this dislike of hers.

"Poor thing! perhaps she is not happy, after all," was Miss Pyecroft's inward comment as she exclaimed:—"Diana!"

Diana looked at her with a fixed, stony look. She only felt that Miss Pyecroft was a hindrance and would have passed on. But the unnatural look caused Miss Pyecro

Advertisers must hand in their favors before 6 o'clock on Monday evening, in order to have them appear in that week's issue.

To Correspondents.

KNOXIE.—1. Ned O'Baldwin defeated Andrew Marsden and George Ilse, was beaten by Marsden, and fought Joe Wormald. The police put an end to the last mentioned fight after they had contended one round, arresting both principals. The stakeholder having ordered another meeting, and Wormald refusing to obey the mandate, the stakes were awarded to O'Baldwin. He also forfeited to Wormald in England (though it was a downright swindle), and was matched with Jim Mace, but the latter was arrested the night previous to the day fixed upon for the fight, and the stakes were thrown. 2. Tom Kelly, of Bradford, beat Connor, Keenes, Bill Brown, Jack Rooke (a cross), and Dick Rowley, and was beaten by Jack Rooke and Harry Allen (brother to Tom).

STAKEHOLDER.—"A said to B 'I'll bet you $20 that you won't (or have not) treat the party (composed of A, B, C, D and E) to drinks.' B said, 'I will bet you $20 I will dare to treat the five to one round of drinks.' The bet was made, $20 being put up on each side. When they got to the saloon A refused to drink, and then claimed the stakes on the ground that the five were not treated. Now, B was perfectly willing to pay for the five, and offered to drink that might be called for. Will you let me know if A can claim the stakes on any such excuse, as we await your decision"——A, for his shrewdness, not only lost his drink, but the wager, and B did not dare to treat the party. A's quibble will not answer, and he should pay the bet.

HAROLD THE SAXON.—1. Ensign Alfred Paget Humphrey, aged 21, and attached to the 1st Cambridge Volunteers, won the Queen's Prize at the annual competition at Wimbledon Common, July 18th. He was one of the team that won the China Cup. He won by 68 points of fair average shooting. Our foreign sporting exchanges do not give the names of the 2. A man has a right to wager trusteed, in this country, for money borrowed by either himself or his wife in a foreign country.

WILLIAM, St. Joseph, Mo.—The game was called base ball in the south part of England fifty years since, at least, so that its present name did not originate in this country, as you and very many others suppose. It was played very similarly to the old Boston game, in which the runner was put out with the ball, instead of being touched, as in the present American mode of play. It was called "rounders" in some parts of England, hence the erratic opinion, probably.

D. A., Houston, Texas.—According to the custom in this part of the country, the two prizes belonged to the parties throwing 45; the throwing off is for choice of prizes. In the case submitted the 43 had no claim; but the understanding seems to have been that the timber was entitled to a purse; it is but fair, therefore, under the circumstances, that A and B should again throw off for possession of second prize.

STOCKER, Boston, Mass.—1. No. Miss Blanche Davenport has never been known by any other name; but Miss Lilly Davenport, when acting in a company where her father, mother and sister, Miss Fanny, were performing at the same time, has acted under the name of Miss Lilly Vining. 2. Inquire at some of the antiquarian bookstores in your city.

JACK B., Cambridge, Mass.—The statements you make are not correct, though you may believe they are. The distance was a little short of two miles on the time was not rightly taken, as Oddy cannot walk the distance in that time. He is not champion of America, and never even aspired to the championship of England.

W. B. S.—You are by no means too old to adopt the stage as a profession. Apply to some manager, in person, and state the matter frankly to him; commence at the lowest round of the ladder and work your way up. 2. You will require very little wardrobe to start with. 3. It is next per line.

H. M. F., Philadelphia.—You must be satisfied as to the terms of the bet before coming to a decision; if it is not perfectly clear to you, and each party makes a different statement, then you had better declare the bet a draw. If you are positive as to the wording of the wager, then decide according to the result.

R. S. R., Keokuk, Iowa.—1. The female impersonator with Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels is a man. 2. O'Baldwin may challenge the victor in the Mace and Coburn fight, but whether it will be accepted or not time can only tell.

W. L. J., Franklin, Pa.—Tony Pastor made his first appearance upon the stage, as a performer in a minstrel band, at Barnum's Museum in the city, in the fall of 1846. Before that he sang at temperance meetings a number of years. He joined a circus in 1847.

J. C. P.—The proper manner to learn the circus business is to apprentice yourself to some one performer, when you are young. We think it exceedingly doubtful if you could find a performer who would take a pupil in charge over twenty years of age.

GRIGGSBY, Brooklyn.—If hearts were trumps, then the left bower was a diamond; so, the heart being turned down, the next player had a right to make it diamonds with the left bower, which then became the right bower.

J. S. H.—If the second belonged to I. when the bet was made, then he wins; if I. did not purchase them until after the wager, then B takes the money. The terms of the wager are not clearly stated.

FLAM.—1. Where each bets that he will win more games than the other and both win a like number it is a draw. 2. Gov. P. not getting more votes than S., as Jim wagered he would, James loses the stakes.

J. P. C., Baltimore.—The Jerome Patterson Bonaparte you refer to was made a colonel by the present ex-emperor, in 1870, but we do not know of his having held a commission before, and certainly he had no title.

CONSTANT READER, Chittenango.—"Humpty Dumpty" had 483 representations; the "Ticket of Leave Man" was played about one hundred nights. The "Black Crook," on its first production, was played 474 times.

J. E. H., Pittsburgh, Pa.—We had received a list of both companies from the managers ere your letter arrived. Thanks, however, for the interest you have displayed.

FRIEND AND SUBSCRIBER, Detroit.—The main stakes have, by mutual agreement, been "merged" in the new match, and your wager is a draw.

A BASE BALLER FROM THE COUNTRY.—1. As they did play ball on the day named, R wins the money. 2. Full particulars concerning the championship question were published in last week's CLIPPER.

HARRY, Chicago.—Dickey Pearce and Candy Cummings, in another column, will supply you with songs and dances and the music thereof.

MANY CLIPPER READERS, Pottstown.—It is well gotten up, but might be misconstrued by the more "moral and refined" of our readers. We must therefore decline it.

ANDY, C.—Ed. James' Purchasing Bureau, whose address is in another column, will supply you with songs and dances and the music thereof.

MANY CLIPPER READERS, Pottstown.—It is well gotten up, but might be misconstrued by the more "moral and refined" of our readers. We must therefore decline it.

A. D., Cincinnati, O.—We do not answer questions referring to the private affairs of professional persons.

DELAWARE COUNTY, Thornbury.—A letter addressed to him in care of this office, will reach him.

STAR ACTOR, Elizabeth, N. J.—We believe the stage of the Old Bowery Theatre is the largest in New York city.

W. H. SEWARD.—The advertisement costs one dollar and fifty cents.

F. L. R., Bath, N. Y.—Ned O'Baldwin stands 6 feet 6¼ inches in height.

LOWRY, Philadelphia.—1. If C took all five tricks on his lone hand he is entitled to four points. 2. On Hoyle's authority.

R. E. V., Oneida, N. Y.—A was right; he could give one point, not having dealt the cards again.

E. W. C.—Tom Sayers defeated Tom Paddock, $250 a side, 31 rounds, 1 hour 30 minutes, Canary Island, June 17, 1860.

SUBSCRIBER, Philadelphia, Pa.—Chas. Rose was never knighted.

M. G., Dayton, O.—We shall not require the services of an agent.

T. ALLEN, St. Louis.—B having ordered it so, A cannot go above.

J. W. SMITH, Agent.—One dollar received, but no advertisement.

SPORT, Washington.—The bet stands on the first game played.

DAN, Bath, N. Y.—The player on the left of the dealer leads.

W. S. W.—Will be published as soon as space can be spared.

JONES, Oskaloosa.—C did not outrun D, and A loses the bet.

O. F. REED, Toledo.—Tne song will be used. Thank you.

OLD READER.—Tom Allen is 5 feet 10¼ inches in height.

HENRI DONI, Chicago.—We have a correspondent there.

SUBSCRIBER, Newport, Pa.—They fought at catch-weight.

J. D.—C. Barton Hill never acted at Sooth's Theatre.

C. A. B., Philadelphia, Pa.—The lady is in the city.

ARTFUL WILLIAM, West Newton, Mass.—Accepted.

PALLADIUM.—See notice in base ball department.

F. J., Syracuse, N. Y.—Respectfully declined.

J. S. W., Philadelphia.—It is a trifle too lively.

BLAIR, Jackson, Miss.—Respectfully declined.

WEYLAND, Chicago, Ill.—1. Yes. 2. No.

L. L. G.—Declined.

THE MARVEL OF THE DAY.—The Westfield explosion excitement has about run its nine days' wonderment, and the great loss of life is beginning to give place to the question:—"What caused the explosion?" It is the marvel of the day, and if the witnesses keep on swearing, as they have been doing, the public will be left in such a state of bewilderment as to wonder if there has been any explosion at all. All sorts of theories have been advanced, and all sorts of supporting evidence in the way of professional swearing have been adduced to throw a light on this fearful calamity; but between the pros and cons, the whys and wherefores, the public are left in a sad state of uncertainty as to what it is all about, and in this way the accident of the 30th of July will die out, and the public mind revert to the more important subject of the "Times' exposé of the mismanagement of our city finances."

THE LONG BRANCH RACES came to a conclusion on Saturday, Aug. 5th, and thousands who made a pilgrimage to that salt water shrine of Bacchus to assist in encouraging equine controversies, now that the exciting sport is over, have returned to the city, leaving the regular habitues of the Branch to worry it through as best they can. It is now a conceded fact that but for the yacht races, horse races, and other sporting events of late years introduced at our fashionable summer resorts, the season would be extremely dull and devoid of life.

THE MUTES are in mute despair over the disastrous results of their late base ball tour in the west. We are beginning to receive the names of the killed and wounded in this heavy charge of the light brigade of ball tossers, but it may be some days yet before the complete details of the unfortunate campaign can be made known. Evidently, some one has blundered. A close up for repairs and recuperation may tend to collect together the dead wood and give the managers an opportunity to sift the wheat from the chaff. "We may be happy yet."

POLITICIANS are buckling on their armor for the coming fall elections; and, to make all secure and rosy, associations in favor of this man and that man are forming in the different wards of the city. "Cappers" are beginning to loom up, and "strikers" are in train for the arduous duties which will shortly be required of them. All is well.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

Weekly Record of the Decease of Prominent Individuals.

COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

ALMON, The Hon. M. B.—A prominent citizen of Halifax, and for many years a member of the Legislative Council—died suddenly, Halifax, N. S., July 29th.

ALVORD, the Hon. D. W.—Formerly a lawyer of note at Greenfield, Mass., and afterwards a collector of internal revenue—died at his farm, near Falls Church, Va., Aug. 3d.

BILLINGS, Amos.—Formerly engaged in the pork business, lately engaged in business on the Stock Exchange, where by his peculiar eccentricities he became well and popularly known, and during the California gold fever amassed a fortune by the sale of a ham, popularly known as the Billings ham. Previous to this he was a member of the firm of Halleck, Billings & Mount, a large dry goods firm of this city, and subsequently has been engaged in the pork packing business in Chicago—died of disease of the heart, N. Y. City, July 30th, aged 53.

BURNSIDE, Mrs.—A daughter of Senator Cameron—Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 3d, aged about 46.

BALENGER, Alfred—Late a lieutenant in the Ninetieth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers—Philadelphia, Pa., July 30th, aged 47.

CARY, Phœbe—Of literary celebrity; born in Miami Valley, O., in 1825, and in conjunction with her sister, Alice, contributed poems and sketches to various western papers. In 1850 the sisters wrote their first volume, a collection of their poetical writings gathered from various sources, entitled "Poems of Alice and Phœbe Cary;" published in Philadelphia. In 1851 they came to New York and wrote for the press—Newport, R. I., July 31st, aged 46.

COUTAN, M.—Late Prefect of Marseilles—committed suicide, France, about Aug. 6th.

CROWTHER, Dick—Circus dancer. Further particulars in foreign news department.

GROVE, Henry—Of the firm of Grove & Brother, well known merchants of Philadelphia—Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 2d, aged 82.

GRAY, The Hon. Oliver C.—A leading lawyer of Illinois, and said to be a direct descendant of the author of the "Elegy Within a Country Churchyard"—Illinois, July 31st.

JONES, J. W.—A native of Delaware, O., for the last twenty years a resident of Washington; keeper of the stationery of the senate, and wrote for the press of the latter city—died suddenly from apoplexy, Aug. 5th.

JOHNSON, Dr. Keith, LL. D.—Of Scotland—Ben Rhydding, Scotland, July 10th, aged 67.

MANSEL, The Rev. Henry Longueville—Dean of St. Pauls London; born on the 6th of October, 1820, at Cosgrove, Northamptonshire; educated at Merchant Taylor's School, afterwards went to Oxford, where he was elected a scholar of St. John's College in 1839; and graduated in 1843 with the honor of "double first." He gained the prize classical and the matheematics. He was appointed reader in metaphysics at Magdalen College in 1855, became Wayneflete professor of moral and intellectual philosophy in 1859, Regius professor of ecclesiastical history in 1867; was the author of "Demons of the Witch" and other poems, published in 1833; also of "Aldrich's Logic" with notes, published in 1849. In 1851 he published his "Prolegomena Logicæ," and in 1858 his "Philosophy of Kant." He wrote the article on "Metaphysics" in the late edition of the "Encyclopedia Britannica," and in 1868 published his "Limits of Religious Thought" and "Expression Lecture," the former of which created quite a sensation. In the following year he published the "Examination of Mursee's Strictures on Brampton Lectures," and in 1860 "Metaphysics; or, the Philosophy of Consciousness." In 1861 "Prayer." Lectures on Smith's Lectures on History" was published, and in 1864 a sermon, "The Witness of Christ's Church to Proofs of Christ's Coming." In 1866 the "Philosophy of the Conditioned" was published. In connection with Professor Veitch he edited and published the lectures of Sir William Hamilton, on logic and metaphysics, which were delivered to the classes of the University of Edinburgh by dispensation philosopher. Leaving his professorship at Oxford to become Dean of St. Paul's, he retained that position till his death—London, Eng., July 31st, aged 51.

MONROE, The Rev. James—A clergyman of the College of St. Francis Xavier, this city, and a nephew of President Monroe. At an early age he became an officer of the United States Navy having been one of the first pupils at the Naval School in Annapolis. He was in the Mexican war and accompanied Commodore Perry in his expedition to Japan. About twenty years ago he became a convert to the Catholic faith, and subsequently entered the Order of the Society of Jesus. Here he rose to distinction as a Professor of Astronomy and Mathematics, the study of which he made a specialty—N. Y. city, Aug. 2d, aged 48.

MADDEN, John.—Deputy Sheriff of Kings county, and a native of Philadelphia. During Johnson's administration he received the appointment of inspector at the New York custom house; served in that capacity until the election of Grant, and was an active politician—died of injuries received as the result of a fire on the Staten Island ferry boat—Williamsburg, L. I., July 30th, aged 45.

MITCHELL, George F.—A well known and aged citizen of Philadelphia—Philadelphia, Pa., July 31st, aged 71.

MILLER, the Rev. Jeremiah—Born in Avon, Conn., in 1806, graduated at Amherst College in 1831, became pastor of a Congregationalist church in Catbrook, and twenty-five years ago removed to Philadelphia, where he became pastor of the Phi adelphia Sabbath Association—a position he held until a few years ago—Philadelphia, Pa., July 24th, aged 65.

MORDAUNT, John—Stage manager. Particulars in foreign dramatic news.

MURPHY, Thomas J.—A native of Tullamore, Ireland; arrived in this country in 1857, and became prominently connected with the press of New Jersey and New York—died of consumption, Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 5th, aged 26.

MORTON, John Ludlow—Eldest of seven brothers, sons of Major General Morton; graduated from Columbia College, afterwards held a responsible office in the New York branch of the Bank of the United States; was attached to the staff of Governor De Witt Clinton, appointed secretary of the Board of Canal Commissioners, and when the state forces were called out in 1812, held a commission and served as a brigade major. In connection with Professor Morse, Inman, Ingham, Cole, and other eminent painters, the influences of Mr. Morton were active in originating and organizing the National Academy of Design. Time is short and precious, energetic workers are needed, and unless some influential persons interested in boating lend their aid, by placing work on a substantial footing, the Centennial Regatta, which many of the yachting enthusiasts who possess the means to accomplish the object, it is doubtful, from present appearances, whether the paltry sum mentioned above can be raised. BOATING ON LAKE GEORGE.—Boating exercise at this picturesque and rural retreat is pretty generally indulged in, as might be supposed, and Waltonians are as numerous almost as the leaves in a forest, and as happy as a party of peasants on a sun-flash being excellent, interspersed with an occasional catch of bass, trout and "a crab." On the 2d inst., an event of more than usual interest occurred on Trout Pavilion, viz.:—a three-mile boat race for a $50 purse, for which four of the most expert oarsmen of the lake coasended, in Whitehall boats, and made a splendid contest, the first and second men being almost bow and bow on their return, which was the closest thing of the time mentioned, save the dividing line, as now understood, between amateur and professional oarsmen had not been drawn, and the rules now in existence were not then formed; consequently he claims, and rightly too, that he cannot in justice be excluded from the circle of amateurs for doing that which there was at the time (even supposing the race had been for money) no law against. Coulter is considerbly heavier than any man in the boat, and it will require more severe training to enable him to row as well as he could do at his best weight, however, he is confident that he will be able to "get down" sufficiently low in flesh in ample season, and be as strong as a horse on the day. Kaye is less in stature and lighter than any of the other men in the boat so that weight is quite an item to him in ordinary dress, as he "strips big," lowering the beam at 142 lbs. in prime fix. ### THE HALIFAX REGATTA AND THE WARDS.

THE REASON THEY DID NOT ENTER—THEY WILL ROW AT SARATOGA.

When the Halifax regatta first became an assured fact the people of the United States turned to the famous heroes of the Hudson Highlands, the veteran Wards, recognized as the finest professional four in the Union, in the fond hope that they would emerge from the retirement in which they had persisted since their defeat by the Tyne crew (now matched against the Tyne four), and again wield the spruces for the honor and glory of the land which gave them birth. Various were the rumors set afoot relative to their intentions, but they kept their own counsel, and the public were left to speculate as to their plans, until the time when they should have began the work of preparation went by without their having sat in a boat together, when it was regretfully accepted as a certainty that the champions were not to participate in the Blue Nose carnival. The "why and the wherefore" was eagerly queried, but until now the public have remained in ignorance. The communication which appears underneath, however, over the signature of Josh Ward (and which was handed us on August 7th by Ellis), clears up the mystery enveloping the matter, and in a manner, too, which will both startle and render indignant those who peruse it. It appears from this that the entire fault lies with Robert Fewster, the English boat builder, whom the Wards, having been favorably impressed with the appearance, build and performance of the "Dunstan" (the boat which the Tyne crew rowed when they defeated the St. John men on the St. Lawrence,) honored with an order for a four-oared shell, and who, after faithfully promising to construct and forward one in due season, not only failed to do so, but did not even condescend to assign any reason for breaking his word, which is certainly the least he could have done. Such actions as this do not reflect credit upon a man possessing the reputation of being the leading boat builder of England, and it is not probable that he will ever again have any one on this side the blue water do him the honor to send another such order. We may be wrong in so surmising, but it is at least reasonable to suppose that a dread of the Wards, upon the part of some interested party, may have influenced him in acting thus dishonorably. Our readers will be gratified to learn, however, that the brothers intend to defend their title of champions of the states (and at the same time endeavor to gain fresh and brighter laurels) in the international regatta announced to be held at Saratoga on or about the 10th of September, in which it is expected that the two English, the St. John and three American crews will compete for the $5,000 prize. If the way is open second to know aught definite concerning the proposed regatta, though it has been talked about for several months. We have before us an extract from a Saratoga paper, giving a list of names of those who have subscribed to the purse, the sums placed opposite their names aggregating $4,200. This was printed early in June—over two months ago—since which time it has been constantly alluded to in the sporting press, but as nothing official has been promulgated. It is about time those having it in charge issued a prospectus, in order to let oarsmen and the public know what to expect. Read the communication alluded to:—

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER.—SIR.—Please allow me space in the CLIPPER for the following, for the boating fraternity, and public in general, who are asking why the Wards are not heard from in regard to the Halifax Regatta, I deem some explanation necessary. In the latter part of last winter we had intended to enter for the then promised $1,000 Regatta at Halifax, and in that view began to train; but everything should be done toward getting us the best rig and in the best trim possible, so no excuse could be offered in case of defeat—Mr. Dick Risdon, through a gentleman well known on this side the other side of the Atlantic, ordered a first class shell from Tyne, England, an order to build us a four-oar boat, the former gentleman making other arrangements for our training, &c. Mr. Jewett expressed himself quite willing to construct the shell, his own terms being received to, and the order was given to him from Liverpool by the first week in June. From letters in Risdon's possession we were assured that everything was satisfactory; but after waiting till the first week in July, and no boat appearing, we broke up our Halifax arrangements, well knowing that to go Tynes and contend with such men as the Tyne crews are composed of (picked as they are from many of the most scientific and able oarsmen of England) without a boat built by Wm. Young, of Tyne, and having lavished encouragement and means upon them; as is also the case with the St. John men, each crew spending months in careful training, with but a few week's practice, would be a waste of time and money, and could result only in once more making an exhibition of ourselves; besides, such an undertaking would be trifling with the country's and the profession's credit. We have been unable to obtain from Jewett even an explanation of this breach of faith. As we are working men we could waste no more thought on his project, and three of us accepted positions training other crews.

Learning lately, however, from a reliable source, that the Tyne crew, the St. John ladies several American crews, were preparing for the regatta to take place in Saratoga early in September, we consider it our duty—claiming to be the "champion four of the United States"—to put in an appearance there, and we give all to understand that we intend to make a desperate effort to retain the above title. As this affair will occur in a few weeks, any disputants to our claim will have an opportunity of contesting it at Saratoga. For this race a boat has just been furnished us by Mr. Risdon and George Roahr, the builder, who is now satisfied and from a state of indifference on so consider her in no way inferior to the Dunstan, built by Jewett and rowed by the Tyne men at Lachine last year. I again assert that we think we are called upon now, when the "Gold Briton" invades our own waters, to meet him, and we shall do so, promising him that we will do our best to maintain our title, and with four weeks' training convince him that at least he will have no walk over. Respectfully, JOSHUA WARD.

THE LATE NORTHWESTERN AMATEUR REGATTA.

THE CHICAGO ROWING CLUB AND WM. B. CURTIS' POSITION.

We are in receipt of a communication, signed by the Chicago Rowing Club, detailing the grievances which led to their withdrawal from the races at the Northwestern Amateur Rowing Association Regatta last month, and assigning reasons therefor which put somewhat different face upon the matter to one which would seem to justify them in pursuing the course they did. They state that they did not start in the six-oared race because W. B. Curtis refused, on account of his eligibility having been called in question, to row, and as the club had no one to take his place at such short notice, they were forced to withdraw from the race. On the day before the race the club received a printed programme, announcing for the first day a race for pleasure and working boats, two miles, free to all. Wishing to swell the entries in all the races, the club took with them a working boat, and entered their janitor for the race. At Oconomowoc an officer of the association informed them that this boat would not be allowed to compete, because outrigged, and they accordingly commenced removing the outriggers to transform it into a suitable boat. A new programme was then issued, on which, under the original announcement, was inserted:—"Four boats must start to make a race. The club had no other men to row, as no one else would enter, this race was a failure. To make this failure doubly sure, some gentleman, probably unaware that the four-boat provision had been inserted in the programme, and fearing that a Chicago man would capture the $25 offered, advisably stole the boat from the boat house, and when the race was called the boat could not be found. All this annoyance and insults convinced the Chicago Rowing Club that they were not invited as Oconomowoc and they folded up their boats like the Arabs, and stole away home." Supposing this to be a plain statement of facts (and we have not seen any contradiction of these assertions), then the Chicagos were justified in withdrawing from the regatta altogether, and it would seem that jealousy had created a conspiracy among the members of the Oconomowoc Club to produce such a result. We may be wrong, and we trust we are, but such is the phase which the statements made cause it to assume.

We have also received a communication from Wm. B. Curtis, the gentleman whose right to be classed as an amateur was denied, and from a perusal thereof we are convinced that injustice has been done him and that he is an amateur in the strictest interpretation of the term. In regard to the contest in 1858, between the Metropolitan Club, of Chicago, and the Toronto, Ont., crew, in which he participated and in which originated the objection to his occupying a seat in any boat taking part in the regatta of the N. W. A. R. A., he stated that at the time the match was entered into no money was dependent upon its result, it being intended merely as a struggle for supremacy, friendly in its character, and though outside bets were made upon it (one of $500 a side) such is not in all races, amateur and professional, not a member of the crew was in any way pecuniarily interested in the issue, and that the race would have taken place even though no money had been wagered upon it. This makes out a case sufficiently clear to exonerate him from the charge of rowing for a money stake. Besides, he makes a good point in saying that at the time mentioned, 1858, the dividing line, as now understood, between amateur and professional oarsmen had not been drawn, and the rules now in existence were not then formed; consequently he claims, and rightly too, that he cannot in justice be excluded from the circle of amateurs for doing that which there was at the time (even supposing the race had been for money) no law against. In conclusion, he says:—"I never in my life pulled for money, nor in an open competition, nor for a division money, nor with a professional in any way, either with or against him; never taught athletics for a livelihood, and am not a laborer, artisan or working mechanic. This, I think, includes all restrictions in force either in England or America." Therefore there cannot be any objection justly raised to his competing with amateurs, and we cheerfully set him right before the fraternity.

PRIZE ROWING AT NORFOLK, VA.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Upon the invitation of the Undine boat club, amateur, of Norfolk, Va., the Potomac boat club, of Georgetown, D. C., also amateur, determined to contest for a prize cup valued at two hundred dollars, offered by the citizens of Norfolk. Accordingly, the crew went into training under the direction of Dennis Leary, of New York, and on Monday, July 31st, went to Norfolk to finish training on the course. On the 2d inst., the friends of the Potomac, to the number of four hundred, took passage on the Lady of the Lake, arriving in Norfolk on the morning of the 3d inst.

The Potomac Club was organized in July, 1869, and now numbers one hundred and ten active, inactive and honorary members; has a fleet of eleven boats, including single and double sculls, two shells, a lapstreak gig and several wherries. They have heretofore rowed none but local races, and have won every race in which they have taken part.

The Undine wished the race to take place in six-oared lapstreak gigs, as they possessed no shell, which was acceded to. The Undine practiced twice daily upon the course, and, up to the arrival of the Potomac crew, were confident of winning the race; but when they saw the Potomac practising, they seemed to lose confidence in themselves, and on the morning of the race the Norfolk papers admitted that the Undine stood no show at all, which was enough to discourage any crew.

The Potomac presented the following as their crew, entering the lapstreak gig, Meteor:—No. 1, S. H. Wheeler; No. 2, E. W. Borthrong; No. 3, George H. Fox; No. 4, T. A. Miller; No. 5, Edward Derrick; No. 6, (stroke), Col. Frank Jones; coxswain, J. H. Gordon. Average weight of crew, 141 pounds. Weight of gig, 250 pounds. Uniform, red shirts and pants, trimmed with white, and red handkerchiefs about their heads.

The Undine entered the gig Whisper, with the following crew:—No. 1, F. H. Campe; No. 2, John Lockhart; No. 3, Charles Hey; No. 4, Wm. Webber; No. 5, W. A. Powers; No. 6 (stroke), John Hebrew; coxswain E. D. Smith. Average weight of crew, 133 lbs; weight of gig, 300 lbs. Uniform, white shirts and pants, trimmed with blue, wearing blue handkerchiefs about their heads.

The Potomac named as judges, Maj. A. V. Nicholson, U. S. Marine Corps, who acted as starter and time keeper, and Mr. Charles Wheatley. The Undine named Col. V. D. Grover and Capt. H. B. Nichols. Referee—J. B. Adamson, Esq.

Boat racing being a new thing in Norfolk, the arrangements were very imperfect, and those having charge did not well understand their duties; all sorts of boats filled the river course, and both crews were subject to the wash of the tugs running before them. At 5 o'clock P. M. the first gun was fired, and at 5.04 the second, the word "go" being given at 5.04:54. Both crews took the water at about the same instant, the Potomac starting out at forty strokes per minute and the Undine at about the same. For several lengths they were side by side, when the Potomac increased to forty-two, and took a slight lead. Seeing this, the Undine pulled up to forty-three, and gained rapidly on the Potomac, and were again abreast. Then the stroke of the Potomac increased to forty-four, but as the Undine rose to the occasion and increased her stroke, gaining considerable distance and with it the lead from the Witch, who had gone to the Virginia side, and was there indulging in short tacks, with light wind to help her; and the Ella and Dauntless, which had come across, having a fine breeze, went along at good speed. The Witch, however, got out of her calm, soon passed the Dauntless, and had every sail set struggling to overtake the Ella, which, when rounding Fort Pool, had crossed to the Virginia side. The leader of the second-class boats, the John T. Given, was overtaken near Alexandria and the yachts were doing their utmost to win. The Dolphin here very quietly crawled up on the Dauntless and exchanged compliments in passing. The stake boat off Potomac ferry was turned by the first-class boats in the following order:—Little Ella, 3.52 P. M.; Witch of the Wave, 3.55 P. M., (just the three minutes lost at Fort Washington;) Dolphin, 3.59 P. M.

ATALANTA vs. VESPER.

A SUGGESTION WORTH CONSIDERING.

Understood we present a communication in reference to a subject which has enlisted the attention of amateur oarsmen and their friends in this vicinity for some time past, but upon which no definite action has, so far, been taken by those directly interested. The victories achieved by the Atalanta Club in the races with Yale and Harvard, for the amateur championship of the states, has caused its agitation afresh and it is earnestly desired by very many that a match be arranged between the champion four-oared crew of the Vesper Club, of Yonkers, and whose three mile (straightaway) time is the quickest upon record, viz.:—16min. 18sec., made on the Hudson river in their race with the Nassaus. Our correspondent seems to speak understandingly in regard to the willingness of the Yonkers Club to enter into such a match, and if such is the case there ought not to be the least difficulty in coming to an agreement, as we are authorized to state that the Atalantas (who by the way are the recognized champions and cannot be expected to issue a challenge) are ready to do what

BASE BALL.

BOSTON vs ECKFORD.

THEIR SECOND GAME.—DEFEAT OF ECKFORDS.—SCORE, 11 TO 1.

The Boston nine feeling somewhat sore at the result of their first game with the Eckfords on Friday, the 28th, the same grounds (Ath-letic) to be played on Monday, the 31st, on the same grounds (Athletic), resulting as the first time allowed for announcing the Union. Considering the short time allowed for announcing the game, there was a fair attendance, some fifteen hundred persons being present. Immediately after the usual delegation of the famous "gold band" marched from the Fifth avenue hotel to the Bostons at the club house, and with Mr. John Wilsey filling the position of Umpire, and Mr. Jas. Wright calling the positions of the players, the game was started.

George Wright led off with a hit to Shelly, who made a very bad throw to Allison, George getting to third on the overthrow and Harry Wright and Harry Wright on another fly to Martin ..... fly to Chapman, and Harry Wright on another fly to Martin ..... For the Eckfords, Nelson hit well but was taken on the fly by Barrows; Chapman, hitting a grounder, was retired at first George Wright's help; Hicks, managing a near fly, a safe hit in front of the plate, was left at second by Holdsworth's hit to Spalding, and retirement at first.

The second innings was a blank for both clubs, Gould going out on a foul bound to tip to Hicks, Spalding on a fly to Nelson, and Barrows by a foul fly to Hicks. Shelly popped up a weak fly to Schafer, Gedney getting to first on a bounding hit to short that Geo. Wright muffed, stole to second, but was caught between that and the third base, and retired by Schafer, the ball having been hit there by Swanland and run to Schafer, the ball having been hit there by Swanland and run to his first. Martin sending him to second by a safe hit over third; both were left by Allison out at first, with Barnes' help.

The third innings was also a blank for both clubs, Spalding, after earning his first, was forced out second by George Wright's hit to Shelly, George getting his first and stealing to second. Barnes was the second hand out, by a fly to Gedney. Birdsall sent out his first by a poor throw by Swandell, George Wright going to third. McVey, however, ended the Bostons' chance for a run by hitting up a foul bound that Shelly got after a long run.....Nelson, by a safe hit between left and centre, made one base, was forced at second by Chapman's hit direct to Barnes, John getting to first. Hicks out on a fly to Barnes, who passed the ball over to Gould in an endeavor to catch Chapman before he could return to first, Chap getting to second on the overthrow, where he was left by Holdsworth, run out in going to first by where he was left by Holdsworth, run out in going to first by Spalding, the latter having been hit almost directly into his hands.

The fourth innings gave three unearned runs to the Bostons through errors by Swandell, Hicks and Holdsworth, Barry Wright, Gould and Schafer being credited with the runs. Barrows and Spalding both going out on flys to Gedney, George Wright earning his base, was left by Barnes, out at first by a hit to Swandell.....For the Eckfords, Shelly went out at first by a splendid one hand stop and throw made by George Wright to Gould; Gedney getting his first by a safe bounder over second, Swandell going out on a long line hit to centre field that Harry Wright took in. Martin followed by a hit over third for one base, sending Gedney to second; both, however, were left by Allison, out at first by a hit to George Wright.

The fifth innings was a short one for both nines. Birdsall, by a short hit to left field, earned one base; McVey out on a fly to Nelson, Harry Wright out at first by a hit direct to Allison; Birdsall going to second and being the third hand out in trying to steal to third, Hicks sending the ball quick to Shelly.....Nelson out on a fly to Birdsall; Chapman, earning one base by a safe hit to left field, was left at second by Hicks, out on a foul bound to Barrows, and Holdsworth at first by a hit to Barnes; the score at the end of the innings standing four to nothing in favor of the Bostonians.

In the sixth innings McVey hit down in front of the plate, safe for one base, Harry Wright going out on a high fly to Gedney; Gould out at first by a grounder to Swandell, McVey getting to second; Schafer hit well out to centre field for one base, and McVey tried to get home, but Nelson sent the ball in from centre field in splendid style to Hicks, McVey making the third hand out.....An error by Gould gave Shelly his base, Gedney going out on a foul fly to Schafer, very handsomely taken by that player; a grounder past short by Swandell, for one base, sent Shelly to second; Martin out on a fly to Barrows, who passed the ball quickly to Barnes at second, cutting off Shelly before he could return, he having run on Martin's hit. Things now looked desperate for the Eckfords, six innings played and not a run scored by them, while errors by them had given the Bostons four.

In the seventh innings they again whitewashed the Reds, Harry Wright going out at first, with the help of Holdsworth; Gould on a fly to the same player, and Schafer on a splendid stop by Shelly and throw to Andy Allison at first.....If the innings was a short one for the Reds, it was equally so for the Oranges. Gedney hit to Barnes and retired at first; Swandell out on a fly to Harry Wright, and Martin on a foul fly to Schafer.

In the eighth innings the Bostons were, for the sixth time, blanked, Barnes going out at first by a hit to Shelly, Spalding on a fly to Gedney, and George Wright at first on a hot bounder to Swandell.....Andy Allison, after two strikes had been called, was sent to first on called balls. A safe bounder by Nelson to right field sent him to second, on which John made one base; Chapman, by a weak hit down in front of the plate, retired at first, Allison getting to third and Nelson to second; Hicks out on a fly to Barrows, Allison getting home, a very close job, as the ball came in finely from Barrows, McVey claiming that he touched Shelly, who was running for Allison, but the umpire decided the case reverse and the Eckfords scrambled a "chicago," Holdsworth ending the innings by a foul fly to Gould.

At the commencement of the ninth innings the score presented a creditable figure for both clubs, notwithstanding the Eckford errors, were at the small end of the horn. Before the Bostons were retired they added seven runs to their score, none of which were earned, Barnes, McVey, Harry Wright, Schafer, Barrows, Spalding and George Wright, each getting in a run on errors made by Shelly, Holdsworth, Allison, Gedney and Hicks, which so affected Martin's pitching that the Bostons batted him for three first base hits, which in the previous eight innings they had only been able to do so for five, the outs being Birdsall on a fly by Gedney, Gould at third by Shelly, and Barnes run out between first and second, by Holdsworth.....For the Eckfords, Shelly got his first on a muff by Schafer, but was left at second, by Gedney out on the fly to Barrows, Swandell on a foul fly by Gould, and Martin at first by Schafer's help, leaving the score standing 11 to 1 in favor of the Bostons.

Comment on the game is almost unnecessary, as all the runs in the game were made on errors, the Bostons being credited with five, one each by George and Harry Wright, Barnes, Gould and Schafer; while the Eckfords are credited with fourteen, three each by Hicks and Holdsworth, two each by Shelly, Swandell and Martin, and one each by Gedney and Allison. All, however, distinguished themselves by some very nice play, George Wright playing his old position of short with all the coolness, skill and judgment that he is famous for, as did Gould at first. McVey's catching was a decided feature of the game, demonstrating that he is one of the best catchers now playing. Hicks also played in his position finely, but was unlucky one way and the other to be second, for every time he did so the ball would fall short, and consequently the runner would get his base, on two occasions men on the third getting home. ## ATHLETIC vs. OLYMPIC.

The Olympics, of Washington, arrived in Philadelphia on Saturday, 5th inst., and played the fourth game of the championship series with the Athletics of that city. The Olympics had only seven men, Waterman and Allison being absent and two amateur players (Rastall, of the Philadelphia Olympics, and Halbach, of the Experts of that city) volunteered their services, and consequently the game can only be regarded as a practice one. The oppressive heat and the fact that the Athletics, besides being without Meyerle's valuable services, had three of their nine in a crippled condition, led many to suppose that the game would be closely contested, but the superior batting and fine fielding of the Athletics enabled them to gain a creditable victory, by a score of 15 to 7.

The Athletics, having lost the toss, were sent first to the bat and received a blank as their share of the first innings. Leonard earned a run for the Olympics, being assisted by a safe hit by Rastall.

In the second innings the Athletics made one run, not earned, however, as Malone was given a life by a high throw of Rastall's; Halbach and Glenn made their bases by fine hits in this innings, but two superb fly tip catches by Malone, and a fly foul taken by Bechtel, led to the retirement of the Olympics for a blank, the score now being a tie, one to one, and the prospect of an exciting contest favorable.

The Athletics, by good batting in the next five innings, scored ten runs, and by the sharpest possible fielding prevented their opponents from adding an additional run. McBride and Bechtel each made splendid three base hits in these innings, Rastall and Mills, of the Olympics, a one making base hits, and both were put out on attempting to steal second, by the good throwing of Malone to Reach.

In the eighth innings the Athletics batted in their old telling style for four runs, three of which were earned, and the Olympics commenced well for making a large score, Hall, Glenn and Thomas leading off with safe one base hits, the former being the only one to score, however, as Reach put the side out; Thomas at second base, with the assistance of Malone, catching Leonard on the fly and assisting to put out Rastall at first base.

The Athletics were whitewashed in the last innings, although Cuthbert and Radcliff made safe hits. The Olympics then went to the bat—aided by an error of Radcliff, they scored five runs, or three more than they had made in the previous eight innings. McBride pitched much slower than usual in this innings, being irritated by some of the Olympics playing a "waiting game" at the bat, and the change in his pace of the pitching doubtless helped the Olympics materially, as both Hall and Thomas made good hits off the slows. Cuthbert, Sensenderfer, and Heubel made some brilliant fly-catches, and Reach played splendidly at second base for the Athletics; Malone also did great execution behind the bat, his throwing to the bases being remarkably good. The Olympics played a fair fielding game, with the exception of Rastall, who threw wildly. Thomas made a very creditable display as catcher, a strange position, and Halbach made some good catches in the out-field. The batting of Heubel and Glenn was excellent. The score:—

LIVE OAK vs. CINCINNATI.

The Live Oaks, of Cincinnati, and the amateur nine of the Cincinnati Club met for the first time on the 5th inst. The Live Oaks presented several new players, among whom were King, late of the Red Stocking nine of 1869, Thomas and Taylor. Barnes, late of the Yale nine, was also to have played first base, but was sick. Their fine fielder, Langdon, was absent, but the nine presented was by far the strongest they have had this season, and would probably give any amateurs in the country their hands full. The pitching of De Haven was very effective, and the fielding of Thomas, Taylor, Brookshaw and Riley was almost faultless. King, as catcher, was rather rusty. The pitching of Dean, for the amateurs, was very swift and effective, and, had it been uniformly supported, the score would have been much lower. Several balks were dropped at first on their side, and some loose playing was done at third and centre field during the first innings, the balance of the fielding being very creditable. Both nines showed a necessity for playing together, but each has fine material. Another game between them will be looked for with interest. The umpiring was judicious and prompt, and gave satisfaction. The score:—

CHICAGO vs. MUTUAL.

The third championship match between the above clubs was contested at Chicago on Tuesday, Aug. 1st, some five thousand spectators gathering to witness the game. Owing to the Mutuals being so badly crippled, it became necessary to alter the positions of the nine. Hatfield went to third base (Smith being prostrated by sickness), Higham to second, Mills to right field, Patterson to left, and Ferguson, though suffering from a lame arm, was placed behind the bat. The contest was not as fine by any means as the majority of those present, unaware of the condition of the New Yorkers, had anticipated; neither nine played up to their usual standard. ## SILVER STAR vs. UNION STAR.

These junior clubs met at Hunter's Point, L. I., on August 4th. It was generally expected that it would be marked by sharp fielding on both sides, but, so far as the Union Stars are concerned, expectation was not realized. On the Silver Stars' side but few errors were made in the field (they batted the ball quickly on grounds to players), while at the bat the blue jackets did some heavy hitting, the ball being knocked all over the field. The Montauks go to Troy, N. Y., with a record of thirteen successive victories and not a single defeat, on Aug. 14th, to try and number the Putnams among their conquests. On Aug. 21st they are to play the Fly Aways, at Jersey City, for the silver ball and junior championship.

SHORT STOPS.

An oleaginous game was played at Cleveland on July 29th, between nines made up of petroleumists of that place and Oil City, the Clevelanders scoring 75 to 27, which showed their defeated nine to be rather "crude" ball tossers. The Cleveland Herald gives the number of errors committed as follows:—Cleveland, 203.431; Oil City, 628.731..... The reorganized nine of the Baltimore Olympics, defeated the Swanns, of the same city, on July 29th, by a score of 31 to 12. With their old nine they had beaten them by a count of 32 to 29 on July 26th..... The Echos of Milford, Conn., were obliged to carry a go to the Good Wills of Fair Haven, on the latter's grounds, Aug. 3d; score, 40 to 34..... The Amity Club, of Jersey City, are ready to receive challenges from all juniors under the age of 16 years—Address M. J. Natile, secretary, Post Office box 257, Jersey City, N. J..... On Aug. 3d, at the excursion of the Joseph Koch Association, to Alderney Park, N. Y., a nine composed of members thereof, and captained by Louis Cohen, defeated a picked nine by a tally of 10 to 4..... The score of a game contested at Douglasville, Pa., on July 29th, between "fat" nines, representing that place and Pottstown, respectively, was 33 to 17 in favor of the former. On their return, on July 30th, a game took place between the Dauntless Club, of that place, and the Mutuals, of Hamilton, the former scoring 32 to 27..... The Champions, of Jersey City, were polished off by the Trenton Club, at Trenton, N. J., on July 31st, the ball being 31 to 3..... The Athletics, Jr., of New York, ran away with the Orientals on Aug. 3d, by a score of 28 to 23..... At Hunter's Point, L. I., on Aug. 12th, the Dauntless Club beat the Friendships; score, 34 to 32..... The Morning Stars were waxed by the Arizonas, at Philadelphia, on the 3d inst., the score being 39 to 23..... The first game of a series for the championship of Western Pennsylvania was played at Alleghany, on July 29th, between the Enterprise Club, and the Olympics, of Pittsburgh, the former winning by a score of 20 to 9..... A number of games were played at New Orleans on Sunday, July 30th. An overwhelming defeat was administered to the Quicksteps by the Pelicans, the count being 50 to 5. The Atlantic Clubs up the Mutuals by the score of 41 to 26. The Rebels bruised the Bruisers, scoring 28 to 22. The Washingtons, jr., vanquished the Evening Stars; 49 to 12. The Webbs and Comet, jr., played a lively game; score, 36 to 19, in favor of the Webbs. The Grasshoppers also beat the Magnolias; score, 31 to 22. The Summer Gang defeated the Echos; score, 29 to 21. The junior R. E. Lees and Quicksteps played an interesting game, resulting in the Lees; score, 28 to 21. The Hopes were too much for the Sugar Shed Boys, whom they beat by the score of 42 to 31. The Morning Stars were punished by the Ali Righis, the figures being 26 to 8. The Capitols scored 35 to the Comets' 12. The Baltics and Nationals met on the Delachaise grounds and played a game of nine innings, which resulted in a handsome victory for the Baltics; score, 23 to 4. The Lone Stars, jr., walloped the Empires to the tune of 29 to 14. The Hopes were conquered by the St. Elmos; score, 16 to 11. The Fly Aways flew away from the Blue Stockings; score 18 to 2. The Young Americas were badly beaten by the Surprise; score, 30 to 7..... The Maroons, of Chelsea, Mass., defeated, on the 3d inst., and beat the Franklins, of that town, by a count of 41 to 30..... A club, styled the Amateur, was lately organized by a party of young men who are passing their summer vacation at New Ipswich, N. H. On Aug. 1st they tackled the Ashburnham, (Colony) Club, and defeated them by a score of 29 to 19. On the 2d they scored a victory over the Milfords, of Milford, N. H.; score, 30 to 6..... At Cincinnati, on August 3d, the Live Oaks forced the Colonels to succumb; 15 to 13 was the score. The Amateur nine of the Cincinnati Club likewise walloped the Milford Club last week, the score standing 36 to 25. The Spring Hills invaded Portopolis on the 3d, and went through the Amateurs to the tune of 16 to 8. The Crescents beat the Orientals, 16 to 7, on the 1st, and the Cincinnati Amateurs were too heavy for the Minas, on the 3d, scoring 29 to 10. The White Stockings and Olympics are to play in Cincinnati on the 15th of August..... Rough and Ready were taken into camp by the Chippers, at South Bend, Ind., on the 3d inst.; score, 9 to 7..... At Washington, D. C., on Aug. 3d, the Independents, of Alexandria, were captured by the Stars, 24 to 14 being the score, and the Creightons were scooped in by a picked nine, who scored 23 to 19..... On July 28th, the Confidence B. B. C., of New Rochelle, N. Y., were presented with an elegant silver ball, as an emblem of the Westchester county championship, by Mr. Thomas H. Fisher, of New Rochelle, N. Y. The presentation took place at the club rooms of the Enira Nous Club, of New Rochelle. The articles of gift, which accompany the ball, stipulate that all clubs in Westchester county have a right to contend for the same, providing they belong to the National Junior Association..... On July 22d the Dauntless Club, of Toronto, administered a trouncing to the Red Stockings, of Barrie, C. W., the score being 57 to 35..... The Emmetts punished the Minas, jr., at Chicago, Aug. 3d; score, 18 to 13..... The Stars, of Brooklyn, are to play the Mansfields, of Middletown, on the Capitoline grounds, Aug. 8th.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP.—A correspondent in Chicago says that we credit the Chicago club with five defeats, whereas there are but four; the fifth, the game with the Rockfords—39 to 14—being only an exhibition game, the series having already been won.

CHICAGO VS. KENIONGA.—These clubs played a game at Chicago on Aug. 5th, the Whites winning by the following score, by innings:—

| | 1st | 2d | 3d | 4th | 5th | 6th | 7th | 8th | 9th |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Chicagos | 1 | 0 | 0 | 2 | 3 | 0 | 3 | 2 | 1—12 |
| Kenionga | 1 | 2 | 3 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 3 | 1 | 0—10 |

ATLANTICS VS. MANSFIELD.—On Monday, the 7th inst., the Mansfield club, of Middletown, Conn., played their first game in Brooklyn on the Capitoline grounds, their opponents being the old time Famous Atlantic. The game was closely contested and resulted in a victory for Brooklyn by the following score by innings:—

| | 1st | 2d | 3d | 4th | 5th | 6th | 7th | 8th | 9th |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Atlantic | 3 | 0 | 1 | 4 | 3 | 0 | 2 | 0 | 4—16 |
| Mansfield | 1 | 3 | 3 | 0 | 2 | 1 | 3 | 0 | 2—15 |

The Mansfields are the champions of Connecticut.

LYMAN'S PATENT SELF-ADJUSTING BATS are being received with great favor by ball players throughout the country. It is claimed by those who use them that a much heavier blow can be given than with the ordinary bat; also that they are lighter and more easily managed. They are new in principle and novel in construction, and it is thought will undoubtedly soon come into universal use. A full description, with cut, of the self-adjusting bats, appears in our advertising columns this week.

TYROS AT THE BAT.—A game was played at Union Park, Allegheny City, Pa., on Aug. 5th, between nines composed of employes of the Chronicle and Dispatch offices respectively, the former team winning by a score of 47 to 34. A double play was made by Kennedy (Barney the Baron,) and Charlton, of the Chronicle nine. This makes the fourth game played between these offices, each resulting the same way.

PEDESTRIANISM.

PEDAL SPORT IN RHODE ISLAND.—A handicap foot race, distance 220 yards, open to all, is to take place at the Washington Trotting Park, Providence, R. I., on August 21st; first prize, a cup valued at $30; second, $15; third, $10. There is likewise to be such racing as throwing and other athletic sports. Entrance $1, to be made either at Dewhurst's, No. 8 Canal street, or E. Healy's, No. 1 Otis street, Providence, not later than the 18th inst.

A HANDICAP FOOT RACE will take place at Washington Trotting Park, Providence, on Monday, August 21st, open to all comers; first prize, $20; second prize, $10; third prize, $5. There will also be sack racing, hammer throwing, etc.

LANG DEFEATS BARLOW.—At the City Grounds, Manchester, Eng., on July 22d, a race of three hundred yards, for £25 a side, came off between the celebrated Bill Lang and Tom Barlow, of Salford, the latter conceding six yards start, Stubbs. The race was a very hollow affair, Barlow never being able to get near his man, and Lang winning very easily by nearly six yards.

WILLIAM JACKSON, alias "Scotty of Philadelphia," ran 100 yards, on Oct 20th ult., for $500 a side, with H. A. Grant, at Cleveland, O., defeating him by two feet. He had previously beaten Philip Shafer at the same place, 100 yards, for $250 a side. Jackson is now matched to run James Harris, the "Cleveland Boy," 100 yards, for $1,000 a side, 'tis said.

CRICKET.

NEWFOUNDLAND vs. NOVA SCOTIA.

On July 28th an inter-colonial cricket match was played at Halifax, N. S., between the Phœnix Club, of that place, and an eleven from Newfoundland. It was the finest match that has been contested there for a long time, and was witnessed by a large number of people. The score:—

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

ON A FAIR LADY.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY LEVIN C. TYRE.

She shone upon the bright saloon.
'Mid mirth and music's sound,
Like moonlight on the glimmering
Of waters dim around;
And when she walked 'twas wonderful
How all our hearts she bowed,
And how she tamed the manliest,
And how she awed the proud.

Some shapes there are, though dear and rare,
By grudging nature given
To teach us here how beautiful
The angels are in Heaven;
And such was she, the queen of all,
The fairest of the fair—
The lady of the gentle heart,
But soul subduing air.

PHILADELPHIA, 1871.

THE "DEAD SECRET."

Coroner Schirmer held an inquest on July 27th, at No. 130 East Twenty-seventh street, in the case of Genevra D. Rockwell, otherwise known as Minnie French, a native of Virginia, 23 years of age, who shot herself in the left breast with a revolver on the 10th of July, in her bedroom, at the fashionable establishment, No. 117 West Thirty-first street. From the testimony of Fidelia Rockwell, the sister of deceased, it appears that they came to this city about three weeks ago, from Charlottesville, N. C., where they formerly resided, intending to visit Saratoga, Long Branch, and other fashionable resorts. They first put up at the St. Nicholas Hotel, but soon after secured apartments at 117 West Thirty-first street, which is sworn to be a house of ill fame. After taking dinner on the evening of July 10th, Fidelia went to her sister's room and found she had shot herself in the left breast with a pistol. Genevra stated that she had shot herself, and, when asked the reason, said that was a secret between "herself and God," and she could not be induced to divulge her reason for the act, saying that it must die with her. Genevra was taken to Bellevue Hospital, and, after remaining there a short time, was removed to No. 130 East Twenty-seventh street, where death ensued. On the above facts appearing, a verdict of suicide by shooting was rendered. Statements made in the various newspapers, as to the mode by which "Minnie French" had found her way to the establishment at 117 West Thirty-first street, were given by Mrs. Heath to be to the contrary. When the sister of Miss Rockwell called at Mrs. Heath's, to arrange for board for herself and her "sister," there is no doubt she knew the character of the house. She saw visitors there and knew that their visits were not on the side of virtue. Instead of "Minnie" being so shocked at the circumstance of finding herself in a house of ill repute as to throw the balance of her reason over and thus to cause her to take her life, the fact was that "Minnie" met, by appointment, and passed the night with a well known gambler at this house on the only two nights that she stayed there, and the night previous to her shooting herself. Mrs. Heath named another house uptown, of a similar character to that which she superintended, where Minnie had stayed for months, and gave the address. Both the deceased and her sister were evidently familiar with New York and the ways of its demi monde. Both girls had lived in a house of prostitution in Richmond, Va., and the address of this house was also given, with the name of the lady who presides over it. Mrs. Heath states that that lady will testify that "Minnie" has for years pursued a professional career of vicious indulgence.

A TOUCHING CONFESSION.

A poor woman gave herself up to the police at Banbury, Eng., about the middle of July, telling them that she had killed her own child. Her story is as follows:—"When I first came to live with Thomas Castle he promised to be married to me; we were to be married before I came to live with him; he was left with no one to look after his own baby; he asked me to come and be married at his own house in Barford; when we came to Barford I was asked in church according to word; when we were outasked he refused to be married; he said we should not be married while we were at Barford; I always thought it was because he did not approve of my child Edward Patrick; after the first month I was there we were always falling out about the chi'd; he was always ill using it; the child always seemed to be in the wrong place; it always seemed to be in the way; he was always on with it in some way for vexation to me. One night when he came home he told the child he had no victuals for him, and asked him if he would go out and beg it; the child said he would; the child was sent to beg his victuals; it was five or six weeks before the child was missed; the child went out to play with the children in the street. Thomas Castle called him in and asked him what he went to play fo ; the child said he did not know; he gave him the cane for not doing what he was sent to do; we never scarce went to bed but what there was a row about the child; I told Thomas Castle one night when he was on about the child that I would take the child away and make away with it; the answer was:—'Why don't you take him and make away with him?" About a month after that I did so; I drowned it myself; Thomas Castle had nothing to do with it; it grieved me to see the child always in the way and being knocked about; I did it on Sunday night in Whitsun week; it was in the pool where it was drowned; it was took and put in alive at half past ten at night; Thomas Castle was gone to Teddington that night; we have fell out since that; he fo'night ago come Sun'ay; I told him I would not live with him; I told him I should leave him; Thomas Castle did not know I had made a way with the child; I did not tell him; he never knew what became of the child; if he had married me and been a father to my child, as he promised to do, it would never have been done; I was a good mother to his child; Thomas Castle is innocent of the child's death; I did it myself, I know; I did it because he should be out of his miserable little life; I mean the child; I only wish to have time to repent before I die."

SEDUCED BY HER OWN BROTHER.

From Memphis, Tenn., we learn the particulars of a most revolting case of incest which was brought to light in that city about July 30th. The girl, it appears, was taken suddenly ill. Her parents thought she was dying, and sent for the physician, who, after a moment's examination, discovered that his patient was in travail. Stepping out of the chamber, he called the father and mother, and asked them if they were aware of the condition of their daughter. They replied that they were not, but supposed it was some sudden attack, and remarked that the young lady had felt unwell for several days. Their consternation and grief may be imagined when the doctor told them the real cause of their daughter's illness. The mother received the heart rending information with a shriek, and fell senseless into the arms of the father, who bowed his head, while a convulsive sob shook his strong frame. Composing their lacerated feelings as best they could, the grief-stricken father and mother, accompanied by the physician, returned to the sick room in a short time. Ordering everyone to leave the room except the physician and his wife, the father went up to the almost unconscious girl and demanded the name of her seducer, at the same time threatening to visit the most dire vengeance upon the villain who had forever ruined one life as well as destroyed the peace of his entire family. At first the unfortunate girl covered her face with her hands, and prayed most piteously for death to come to her relief, but utterly refused to name the author of her shame. By repeated threats, intermingled with solicitations from her mother, she finally named her own brother as the guilty man. This last blow was too much, for, with a low, heartbroken gasp, the poor mother fell lifeless on the floor, and it was only by the most assiduous care and treatment that she was ever restored to consciousness. The brother referred to has always been regarded as an exemplary young man. A few days since he left the city, ostensibly to visit some relatives, but as he has not since been heard from, it is supposed he has fled to parts unknown. From repeated questions asked the girl, it was learned that her unnatural brother had first led her from the paths of virtue when she was but fourteen years of age, and since that time has been criminally intimate with her repeatedly. The girl gave birth to a fully developed child, which, in company with its mother, are doing well. She is about seventeen years of age, beautiful in face and charming in manner, and had always been regarded as an especial pet.

DIVORCE.

The divorce laws of Indiana have long been a disgrace to a civilized country; a new illustration of what may be one through them has lately occurred. A certain Dr. Samuel D. Humphreys, residing at Paterson, New Jersey, where he had a wife and two children, left home in the summer of 1870 for a visit to the west, ostensibly for the purpose of seeking a more lucrative practice of his profession. His wife soon received letters from him from Lafayette, Ind., stating that he had opened an office there and that his success was fair. Letters were at first warm and affectionate, but soon grew short, cold and formal. Suspicion was excited, an attorney at Lafayette was written to, and the wife, accompanied by one of her children, soon after made a visit to that place. She there ascertained that her husband had taken with him from the vicinity of Paterson a woman of bad character, who had for a short time been a servant in his family. He next made application in a neighboring county for a divorce, alleging that he had been a resident of Indiana for one year, whereas in point of fact he had been there less than four months, and that his wife had abandoned him. His wife and her friends had no suspicions of what was going on until some months after the divorce had been granted and the husband had married the woman whom he had taken with him. The evidence on which the divorce was procured has been abstracted from the records, so that it is impossible to ascertain who the witness or witnesses were, or what they swore to. The curious fact is that, although a divorce should be procured in Indiana by the most flagrant fraud and perjury, the courts hold that they have no power to review the decree, and that the divorce is irrevocable. Upon ascertaining how the case stood, the wife published a statement of facts in a local paper, and on the following night the doctor, with his new wife, disappeared without leaving his address. The victim of this fraud is an excellent and intelligent lady, of the purest character, who now finds herself with her two children, fine little boys of six and eight years of age, deserted and homeless. Until the time that her husband left, her married life had been a most happy one, and she had no suspicion of the infidelity of her husband until she discovered that he had been divorced and married again.—N. Y. Star, July 31st.

A ROMANCE IN GIPSY LIFE.—About a week ago, in the south part of Bloomington, O., in the timber, were camped two wagon loads of gipsies, about sixteen in number. Among them, says a local paper, was a beautiful girl, neatly attired in a gipsy costume, with black flowing tresses. Our information is from her mother, and it can be relied upon as being correct. The party lived in Zanesville, O., and a young man of that place had become enamored of this young girl, and sought her hand in marriage, which the mother objected to, and in company with this party was traveling to the far west for the purpose of getting away from this young man. He had received the sympathy of her step-father, whom the mother refused to live with. The story is that the young girl is an heiress and the young man is in rather poor circumstances, and hence the objection. The young man and his associate made their appearance at the company ground at Bloomington, and sought to force the girl to accompany him. Then other interfered and a war of words ensued. A proposition was made that if the mother would agree in writing that when the lover had acquired some means he should have the prize, then he would not give her further trouble. This she refused to agree to. The girl was inclined to go, but the parent would not allow her to do so. The young man drew a knife and the mother a pistol, and were about to engage in a mortal combat, when the daughter sprang between them. The pistol was snapped twice, but failed to go off. The lover and step-father left immediately, and nothing more of interest transpired at that time. The mother said if they had recently tried to get her child away, a d that she would shoot them the next time without saying a word.

A FARM LABORER at Hempstead, L. I., a few days since, ran away with an adopted daughter of his employer. The Romeo was fifty years of age, and his Juliet only fifteen.

ABDUCTION.—Justice Hogan, at the Tombs Police Court, on July 28th, investigated a complaint against Mrs Amelia Myers, the keeper of an intelligence office at No. 2 First street, corner of the Bowery, and Louisa Hefner alias Madame Hines, No. 70 Forsyth street. The charge against these women is for having abducted a young girl named Johanna Parker, of respectable connections. The girl is but 17 years of age, and left her home in New Rochelle, about nine months ago, and came to this city under the protection of an elder sister who resides here. She alleges in her affidavit that on May 25th she applied to Mrs. Myers, at her office, for a situation. Mrs. Myers procured employment for her as nurse in a family in Fourth street, where she remained about two months. Seeing again in want of work, she made a second application to Mrs. Myers, and was recommended to Madame Hines. Soon after reaching the house she became acquainted with its character and endeavored to escape, and was subsequently locked up in her room. After she had been here four days her sister heard of her where abouts, and obtaining the assistance of an officer, had her released. She then made a complaint against Madame Hines, at the Tombs Police Court, and the house was visited by the police, who arrested all the inmates. Madame Hines testified in her own behalf that Miss Parker stayed with her two or three days and then went away, but came back the next day and said she had quarrelled with her sister, and that if she (the witness) would take her back she would not go away again. She would take her back she would not go away again. She made no effort to restrain her, and she could have left the house at any time. The two defendants were committed for trial.—N. Y. World, July 29th.

SNUBBED.—The Prince of Wales and the Marquis of Lorne are evidently not on good terms, as will be shown by the following, which appeared in the Dundee Advertiser, and from its London correspondent:—"A curious story is in circulation with regard to the relations of the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louisa to the other members of the royal family. I believe that at the Duke of Sutherland's banquet to the Russian Grand Duke, now in this country, the Marquis and Princess were treated as members of the royal family. The Prince of Wales, however, will not accept this view of the position, and at the state ball the other night gave orders that the Marquis should not be admitted at the royal entrance. He was accordingly refused admittance, and the Princess declined to enter except with her husband, saying that her place was where he was. The Marquis would not take the Princess in by the general public entrance, and the result was that they did not attend the ball. The circumstance has caused a good deal of talk in upper circles."

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—In this city, on July 27th, Ellie V. Foster, a young woman, an inmate of the house of prostitution kept by Jennie Bennett, at No. 115 West Twenty-fifth street, attempted to put an end to her existence, which had become unendurable, by swallowing a quantity of laudanum and chloroform. Her condition was soon discovered, and Dr. Cameron summoned, and on examining her, found that she had not taken enough of the poisons to cause death. The usual remedies were applied, and the girl was soon restored to consciousness. She was subsequently taken to the Jefferson Market Police Court and committed for examination. Ellie is a native of this city, and but 23 years of age. She had become disgusted with the life she was leading, and there is no doubt that she intended to take her life, as she left a note on the table in her room bequeathing all her effects to a colored washer woman in her employ.

TRAGEDY.—Henry Ellington, for some time an unsuccessful suitor of Lizzie Smith, of Indianapolis, Ind., on July 30th made a final proposal for her hand, and being rejected, attacked her, throwing her to the ground and stamping upon her. He then took a brick and beat her head and face in a shocking manner, severing one ear and breaking her jaw. He then fled to the woods, leaving her for dead. An alarm was raised, he was pursued and caught by the neighbors, and is now in jail. Miss Smith was alone when attacked, her parents being at church. Her recovery is impossible. Ellington says that he is only sorry he did not make sure work of his victim. It is feared that he will be lynched.

LOVE IN EARNEST.—A young Prussian officer who doubted the love of his affianced bride, requested one of his friends, after the battle of Gravelotte, to inform her that he had been killed, and to report to him how she bore the news. The result was that the girl committed suicide, and the lover, shocked at the tragedy he had so unwittingly caused, became a raving maniac, and is now an inmate of an asylum in Berlin, where he is regarded as incurable.

DEATH FROM OPIUM.—Fanny Wilson, age 23, one of a number of abandoned women arrested in Canal street, on July 23d, and subsequently committed to Essex Market prison, died on July 24th, from an overdose of opium. She had been accustomed for several years to take opium to quiet her nerves, and on this occasion miscalculated the amount.

ADULTERY.—Robert Stevens, a soldier of Fort Warren, went to Boston, Mass., on July 24th, and "chummed in" with Catharine McGrath, whose husband is in state prison. They were found acting criminally in a house in that city on July 25th, and taken to the station house. Their case was postponed, and each was committed in default of $600 bail.

HOW I BECAME A GYMNAST.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

The first circus I ever attended was that of Dr. Thayer, sometime in the year 1861. On leaving the "spacious pavilion" my mind was made up to become a circus performer, or break my neck in the undertaking. Accordingly I feigned sickness, and urged upon the principal of the academy, which I was attending (I was fourteen years of age), the necessity of recreation at my home to recruit my waning (?) health. I never shall forget the incredulous smile that stole over the worthy "Prof.'s" face, as he elevated his shaggy eyebrows and remarked, that I "appeared robust and active; why," said he, "you can out-run, out-jump and out-throw nearly my whole school, and the cert-wheels I have seen you turn, convince me, my son, you are not exactly the person to go home the little chap I saw a week ago suspended by your knees in the belfry tower?" I acknowledged the corn, but "countered heavily" on the admission, by adding that I had sustained serious injury by the feat, and needs must seek repose and quiet for a time, at least.

This assertion, strange as it may appear, failed to carry conviction with it. It was altogether too thin. I was dispatched to my room in the fourth story to prepare for my Latin recitation, and here is the modus operandi—that is all the cussed dead language I ever conquered—and "bill of fare," after turning the key in the door. "Birds of a feather," you know, "will room together."

A set of boxing gloves (my board money bought 'em) was quickly pulled on by Sam and I, and what I have since learned to term "slog, job and get away," was then and there fully exemplified.

"Latin be hanged," said I:—"Sam, my boy, I'm going home to practice gymnastics. The old cove down stairs says I'm as healthy as a buck, when you know, Sam, I am severely feeble, ha! ha! ha!" I am going to leave this country for the country's good."

So saying, I raised the window and pitched the lexicon and "spudding bags" far out into a strawberry bed, and grasping the lightning rod, which ran within reach, I gently descended. I discovered that the air line I had chosen would carry me directly "outside" the chapel window. I ventured to look aloft and Sam's face was split from ear to ear He saw "how it was himself."

The distance from terra firma was to great to "drap," so imagining myself performing La perche equipoise," I gradually neared the dreaded window. I looked in majesticaly, and, I may add, with supreme contempt, as I slid toward the ground.

I barely had a passing view of the back part of the "Prof.'s" bald head, so close that I might have "punched" it, and a room full of broad grins, for that was my class, and the dear souls wouldn't come back on me. The grating noise occasioned by my swinging clear of the rod at the bottom was heard by the old cove and his nose nut was thrust out of the window just in time to see me upon the classic form of the "sick boy," knee deep in the strawberry bed, gathering Uncle Tovee's best fruit. He must have been more deeply impressed than ever before with my pedalistic powers when, a second later, I tore through the common. It was a "home run," and I astonished myself.

One inhuman wretch cried "stop thief," and several "dorgs" followed in my wake, which I inwardly cursed. My trunks were quickly packed and I was at the station in half an hour, nervously awaiting the eastern train and trembling that delay would enable the professor to get the "dead wood," on me.

"On time," says the indifferent agent.

The whistle blows and the steaming horse is with us. 'Ere the wheels ceased revolving, I was seated, congratulating myself on my lucky escape from hard toil and, comparing my lot to that of my caged companions in the latin class. We were off "with a rush, a roar and a rattle." I stood upon the rear platform as we moved away. There were but few persons at the station now, but a casual observer might have seen a gentleman verging hard upon sixty summers, flushed and frantic, interrogating those whom he jostled against for information, and I fancied him saying:—"The boy, sir, is unwell, too sick to travel, etc." I recognized him at once, and, with a Chesterfield air, I raised my hat and bade him "sweet olive oil."

Five years later I presented the astonished instructor with "complimentaries" for "Howe's Great European Circus." But I anticipate and will return to the subject.

Directly on arriving home I set about erecting stanchions for swinging rings, trapeze, horizontal bars, etc., such as I had seen at Thayer's show, and, in connection with an attache of a saw mill in the vicinity, who also had a "vaulting ambition," we soon became the wonder of the rural district in which we resided.

There was one great barrier to our advancement, and until that could be overcome we need not expect to reach the topmost round in the acrobatic ladder. This was the very essential feat of throwing a backward summersault. To be sure I had never essayed it, although many times I had arranged the feather beds and pillows, mounted a chair, looked over each shoulder alternately, cussed my timidity and came down. Brother acrobats, have you ever been in a similar fix years ago? and do you not think the uncertainty there is in an amateur attempting a new trick? Wandering by the river's bank one morning, I conceived an idea which materially changed my course in life.

It was this:—

Together with my "understander," we secured a stick of square timber, fastened the ends tightly at either margin of the stream, and hastily throwing off our clothes we proceeded to the centre thereof, resolved to do or die. I stood erect in the morning sunlight upon the unsteady spruce. The birds sang around me in "ground and lofty" strains. Joe sat astride the timber with open mouth to see my first "backward toss," and he was not disappointed, you bet. Gathering myself up for the trial, I threw all the elasticity into the movement. Springing upward and backward, with my head well in advance, I came down on the surface of that pellucid rivulet square on my back, having gone over once and a half.

I insisted upon playing audience now, and caused Joe to entertain me. Several times he would strike on his head, and his big feet (feat) disappearing at every successive trial, struck me as being decidedly against the boy distinguishing himself in the sawdust arena. My second attempt was a crowning success, and was repeated many times until I had gained sufficient confidence in my India rubber composition. So far, so good. How would I dare risk my vertebræ on the "cold, cold ground."

We hastened to the "old barn" (all of you can remember some "old barn,") pulled on our "pretty clothes," when I advanced to the carpet with the air of a professional, and in a twinkling, accomplished a clear cut backward, and two passable "flip-flaps." Perhaps I was not the lion among the boys—and girls too—in the neighborhood. I was considered a perfect wonder. Well, I readily improved in my "line of business," and in six months I awoke one morning and found myself famous" in one of our largest cities.

I have long since abandoned the "craft" and the uncertain nature of its calling, still the "hoop-la" and the aroma of the enchanting sawdust circle, awaken a keen desire to be "with you once again my friends."

In my next I will depict some of the inner life of the traveling circus, as I have in this epistle to d you how I became a gymnast.

MINSTREL GAG.

Bones Goes to an Execution and a Wedding.

INTERLOCUTOR.—You seem to be chewing the cud this morning, Mr. Bones. Doubtless you have something good in store for us.

BONES.—No; I was only thinking how I could get even wid Bruder Velas for dat last sell dat he play on me.

INT.—Indeed; what was that?

BONES.—Why, he told me to go down to de Hall Park and I'd see a great execution. So I went down dere and looked all around, but I didn't see no scaffold, nor none of de usual preparations, dough to be sure dere was a great crowd aroun' de office of de sheriff, and when I axe scout de hangin' business, what do you tink it was? Why de officers had been layin' an execution on some poor devil's property; dat was all; and I had my trouble for my pains.

INT.—That was not very sharp in you, Mr. Bones.

BONES.—No; but I went back and put a Mansard roof on him: dat's what. Head looks like a cupalo dis morning.

INT.—I hear Foley is getting to be quite gay over in your quarter of the town, Mr. Bones. Has anybody been dying there recently?

BONES.—No; but dere's been somebody gittin' married, and dat's almost as good as a funeral.

INT.—Indeed; who are the happy pair?

BONES.—Dey aint no pair at all now, for didn't de parson make dem one when he splice dem? Dere aint no more Dinah Squash down our way now since she took dat preposterous darkey, Pompey Cowbell, for a husband. Old teller aint got nuffin to do now but drink mint juleps and lay around loose.

INT.—Loose? I should call that a pretty good recipe for getting tight.

BONES.—Dey gave a grand blow out de night of de wedding, for you know de old gal's got de shiners.

INT.—Followed by a blow-up, I suppose, if Mr. Cowheel didn't behave himself.

BONES.—I don't know 'bout dat, only I heard dey had a fallin' out already.

INT.—Dear me! So soon, too?

BONES.—Yes, fell out of bed de fust night ob de nuptials. Had a gay old party, though.

INT.—Were there many present?

BONES.—Lots. Two big rooms full; all de kullered aristocracy was dere, and more pooty gals dan eber danced at a weddin' befo'. You jist ought to seen de bride. Had a string of carbuncles round her neck worth a thousan' dollar, and another on her nose; hair all done up in hundred dollar bank bills for curl papers. De costume was plain white gauze, wid a sunflower on de breast, and she hab de Grecian bend till she looked like a camel. Dem de boys dey got out derr instruments and serenaded de bride on de Calathumpian plan, until Pomp got mad and hove de wash pitcher over dem. And says he, "De compliments ob de bride, and here's hoping you like it Bobby I!" The little "black and tan" says "heads," but "tails" it is, and the pleased expression of Jimmy's face is enough assurance for the crowd, who again pour forth their joyful lay. A natty little fellow, with black moustache, straw hat, &c., makes his appearance upon the ground, and much to the surprise of the lookers on paces off the base lines, pitcher's position, and then back to the back stop. Finding that all right, he inquires the locality of the scorers, approaches them, asks if they are all O. K., receives an affirmative reply, and then prepares for biz. The Whites take their positions, when it is noticed that Joe Simmons is missing. Tom Foley occupying centre field. Joe has not done his best of late, so the crowd look upon the substitution with favor, and their short breaths of anxious expectation are given an impetus by Jennie's jaunty, as is his wont, to the home plate. What's that? Ah! an enterprising photographer. The boys strike an attitude and the "pictur is took." By this time the crowd have become not a little interested concerning the result. "The air is full of Lennon," says one. "Yes it is," says another, "for the papers said Lennon was to umpire the game." Finally, it is authoritively announced that the umpire is not Lennon, but a Jeremyan named Bonsoldier. He is called, and George is observed charming the ball. Whis! and Dickey ducks his head just in time; again, and the third time Dickey cracks it hard, and away it goes skyward in Treacy's direction. All right, thought the crowd, there's but two! wasn't there, for he misjudged the fly, which was a difficult one to get under, and before the ball was secured, Dick was holding fast to third. The crowd were much amazed at this unexpected result, and did not cheer very hard. Hatfield then took a hand, and hitting a fair foul red hot liner to third, brought Pearce home and got safely to first. Smith tipped up a very high twisting foul back of first, which McAtee handled in splendid style. This made the crowd feel better, but their cheers soon changed to curses, as they made a wretched failure of Jordan's assistant in getting under Wolters' high one, Hatfield scoring. Start sent one of his showy fellows to Treacy, and rested his supple limbs upon the ward. Mills took first on a corking hit to left, but was left on second, as Ferguson was thrown out on a splendidly taken foul hooked by Treacy. Two runs, neither earned. A deplorable commencement for the Whites, and the crowd felt sick, their symptoms growing much worse as Duffy, Wood and Treacy fell victims in rapid succession to Pearce

HAYMAKERS vs. STAR.

On Monday morning, July 31st, the Amateur Stars, of the City of Churches, visited Troy, for the purpose of engaging in a contest with the Haymakers, but the weather was so unfavorable that a postponement of the contest until the 1st inst. was rendered necessary. The game has seldom been surpassed in brilliancy in that neighborhood, and excited the spectators to the highest pitch. Cummings pitched as he had seldom pitched before, and the Haymakers found it exceedingly difficult to punish his delivery. In the first six innings the Haymakers only succeeded in tallying two runs, and these were presented to them by errors on the part of the infield of the Stars. During the three remaining innings the Haymakers batted very carefully and managed to score 7 runs, two of which they earned. York was the only man on their side who seemed able to hit the ball. McMullin, by wild pitching in the fifth innings, gave the Stars three runs, and Craver allowed another man to score in the sixth by a bad throw from second to first. When the Stars went to the bat on the ninth innings the Haymakers had a lead of three runs. Rogers and Worth went out before reaching first base, which Thake, who followed, managed to hold. Clyne sent an easy fly to Kieg, who muffed it, and made an awful wild throw to first; both men came in. Beavins, the next striker, reached second, but was put out in trying to steal third, thereby ending the chances of the Stars to tie the game. The score:—

AMITY vs. FLY AWAY.

LEFEAT OF THE JUNIOR CHAMPIONS.

On Thursday, the 3d inst., a game for the junior championship, between the Fly Aways and the Amitys, was played on the lower Capitoline Grounds. The game was a one-sided affair, and was won by the Amitys, who completely out-played the champions at every point. So badly demoralized did the Fly Aways become, that in the seventh innings the Amitys scored fifteen runs. The score:—

A FEW REMARKS.—A correspondent in Cincinnati, signing himself "Gillons Hoban," requests space for the appended remarks, which the same he would rise to explain:—

CINCINNATI, Aug. 3d, 1871.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER.—SIR.—As a reader of the CLIPPER for the past five years, and as an admirer of its efforts in behalf of our field sports, I take the liberty of addressing you as to the policy of a return to the old form of series of our ball players, instead of that of the present, as, in our humble judgment, it is better calculated to promote the interests of our national sport than the present method. Under the old form, our prominent clubs never found it necessary to play more than three games, and with many two were sufficient to settle their claims of excellence, but now it is found agreeable by our leading clubs to play four or five games. We have often seen that our game was dying out, that trickery and fraud had been resorted to in some of the great contests of the past. The spectacle of a leading club, composed of the most celebrated players, failing to score a single run against a club that thought themselves unable to compete for the eagerly sought for title of champion, and only a few days after defeating them by overwhelming odds, has created a feeling of distrust which cannot be easily smoothed over. We may be assured by club officers that such is the fortune of the game, that its members had striven their utmost to excel, but the fact of the wholesale change of positions and the absence of most valuable players still remains, and no reasonable excuse can be offered for it. Such actions cannot be continued long, and will ultimately end in the dissolution of such organization, as has been the case with one which, for years, had been a tower of strength on the ball field, and to-day are where? Scattered from the Atlantic Ocean to Lake Michigan, the objects of the public's distrust. The same fate awaits all others who attempts to tread in their footsteps. Justice is certain.

DRAMATIC VS. SOCIAL.—A game was in order between these metropolitan clubs at Bergen, N. J., on Aug. 1st, the Dramatic being short of their pitcher, Charles Bearman. The result is given below by innings:—

| | 1st | 2d | 3d | 4th | 5th | 6th | 7th | 8th | 9th |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Dramatic | 0 | 7 | 1 | 2 | 1 | 2 | 5 | 1 | 5—24 |
| Social | 0 | 0 | 3 | 1 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 0 | 1—15 |

Umpire—Mr. Waugh, Silver Star B. B. C. Time of Game—2:25.

THE LONE STARS.—This New Orleans club returned home on the morning of August 3d from their northwestern tour, which was quite successful, though the number of games played was small.

A JUMPING HANDICAP, in the Lancashire style, at "stand pat," or hop, two strides and a jump, for £25 and a cup, came off at the Royal Oak Park grounds, Manchester, England, on July 15th, the entries embracing J. Emerson (scratch), J. Selby (6 in. start), J. Merchant (9 in.), C. Mills (18 in.) and Gavin Tait (26 in.), all celebrated men. Emerson proved an easy victor, clearing 15 yards, 8 inches in the first essay, the nearest to him being Selby, who fell 9 inches behind in the second attempt.

THE LONG BRANCH AUGUST RACE MEETING.

FIRST DAY, TUESDAY, AUG. 1st.

VISITORS WINNERS OF THE HURDLE RACE: MIDDAY OF THE MILE DASH, AND SALINA OF THE CONTINENTAL HOTEL STAKES.

The August Meeting of the Long Branch Race Association commenced at Monmouth Park on Tuesday, the 1st inst. The weather for a week past had been cold and wet, and fears were generally entertained that the races would suffer from the absence of the season at this favorite seaside resort, which is but more than half full at its customary complement of summer visitors. Fortunately these fears proved unfounded, for the weather on the opening day was delightful: the skies bright and clear, the sun warm and genial, and the attendance large and fashionable. Last meeting, great dissatisfaction was expressed at the miserable arrangements for bringing the New York visitors back to town; they had to wait a long time either at the track, or at Long Branch, before they could proceed homewards, and in consequence it was at a late hour when they arrived in the city. This has been remedied at the present meeting, for a train leaves the course immediately after the races are over, and making connection with the steamer at Sandy Hook, visitors are landed in the city about 6 o'clock in the evening, in comfort and punctuality. The first day's sport passed off with great eclat, the racing being of an unusually interesting character. The hurdle race was won by the new acquisition for cross country horses, Vesuvius, beating Astronomer, Harbinger and King John, after a capital contest. King John is a new beginner at this business, and gives promise of distinguishing himself as a hurdler, for he is a particularly clever jumper, and when in condition, will be a dangerous antagonist. As it was, he ran comparatively unprepared, his new trainer, Antony Taylor, having only had him in his care two weeks. Vesuvius, the winner, is by Vandyke, a son of the famous brood mare Britannia, and, when he is a little older, and his frame more matured, he will be a formidable rival to old Oysterman himself in steeple chases and hurdle races, for he jumps splendidly, and has a fine turn of speed to finish with. Astronomer, who finished second, also promises well for a novice, and considering he was ridden by a boy who had only once been engaged in a race of this kind, he did remarkably well. He is well bred, being by Asteroid, out of Miss Carter, and was bought last fall at the Jerome Park annual sale for $30 by Dr. Weldon, who broke him to harness, and finding that he had some speed, he put him to jumping, and his initiatory public performances have been highly satisfactory. He is only three years old, and, when more matured, will doubtless prove himself a first class cross country horse.

The Trial purse for all ages, a dash of one mile, brought out eight runners, of which Mr. Doswell's Midday, who had shown high form at Saratoga, was made the favorite against the field, which comprised Daunter, his own brother to Pompey Pasha; Niagara, Impecunious, Ratan, Miss Nelly and a Bulletin colt. After an exciting contest the favorite won the race cleverly from the little-esteemed Impecunious, who was so little thought of that he sold in the field. Mr. Doswell was warmly congratulated by his brother turfmen.

The Continental Hotel Stakes for the $1,000 given by Mr. Burrows, the proprietor of that establishment, and the additional $50 sweepstakes, afforded the best race of the day. It was for three year olds, and seven out of the twenty-seven entered came to the post. These were Salina, Sancebox, Stockwood, Nathan Oaks, McKinney, McDaniels' Australian filly and Coffee's Bonnie Scotland colt. Salina, who had won the Monmouth Oaks States, was the favorite, although the southern turfmen staunchly backed the Mobile filly, Sancebox, while the western men stuck to Stockwood, who was represented as having recovered from a bad case of lung fever he suffered under at the last meeting. He figured most ludicrously, and the prestige which last year Kingfisher cast over Mr. Swigert's stable has departed. Sancebox did not realize the hopes of her friends, although she ran second in both heats.

THE HURDLE RACE,

for a purse of $800, for all ages, two miles, over eight hurdles, welter weights, had five entries and four runners. These were Messrs. Gaffney and Tully's b g Vesurius, by Vandyke, dam Lizzy Berry, 4 yrs old, carrying 148 lbs; J. W. Weldon's br c Astronomer, by Asteroid, dam Miss Carter, 3 yrs old, 130 lbs; R. Shea's b h King John, by Lexington, dam Lucy Fowler, 4 yrs old, 138 lbs, and Joseph Donahue's br g Harbinger, by Lexington, dam Lucy Fowler, 4 yrs old, 148 lbs. Gaffney rode Vesurius, Sutcliffe was on King John, Hyland on Astronomer, and McCarty on Harbinger. The betting was as under:—

| | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Vesuvius | $60 | $180 | $175 | $250 | $350 | $315 |
| King John | 15 | Field | 135 | 100 | 150 | 200 | 120 |
| Astronomer | 10 | | | | | | |
| Harbinger | 10 | | | | | | |

At the start King John led over the first hurdle, followed by Astronomer and the favorite next, the latter knocking it flat on the ground as he went over. King John at once opened a gap of six lengths around the home turn, which he increased on the second hurdle, which he took cleverly, followed by Astronomer, with the favorite third and Harbinger fourth, one of the latter two horses knocking it down as he jumped the ditch. King John's lead diminished on the home stretch to two lengths, and at the third hurdle Astronomer and Vesuvius were this distance behind him. Turning into the home-stretch, Vesuvius collared King John and led him over the fourth hurdle. As the horses passed under the string, to enter on the second mile, Vesuvius was two lengths in front, with King John second, four lengths before Astronomer and Harbinger already tiring and falling back. From this time the favorite had it all his own way, for although King John made a splendid effort to reach him on the turn into the home-stretch, he failed to get up, and Vesuvius won the race by three lengths, Astronomer coming with a rush at the finish, beating King John and securing second money. Harbinger was beaten off. Time, 4:05¾. Summary:—

Second Heat.—The pools now sold—

| | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Salina | $600 | $425 | $300 | Sancebox | $500 | $261 |
| Stockwood | $175 | $210 | $135 | McKinney | 390 | 410 |

| | | | | Field | 130 | |

FIRST HEAT.—Salina had a decided advantage in the send off, Sancebox being second and McKinney third. The last named rushed to the front on rounding the turn, and led Salina a length at the quarter pole, which she increased on the back stretch, where McDaniels' filly passed Sancebox and became third. At the half mile pole Malita got to the saddle girths of McKinney, deprived him of the lead on the lower side, and galloping clear away from the others, won "in a hack down" by six lengths, in 1:47; Sancebox being second and McDaniels' filly third, beaten only half a length.

Second Heat.—The pools now sold—

| Stockwood | $175 | $210 | $135 | Field | $120 | $115 |
| Field | 80 | 75 | 50 | | | $100 |

After repeated failures, a start was at last effected, but it was a wretched one, owing to the fractiousness of Sancebox and McKinney. Salina, as before, got the lead, and continued to hold it to the end, as she was never headed, and won easily by two lengths; Sancebox second, ten lengths before McDaniels' filly. Time, 1:46¾. Summary:—

SECOND DAY, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 2d.

MALITA WINS THE THE THESPIAN STAKES, IDAHO THE SELLING RACE, AND SCURRY THE MANSION HOUSE STAKES.

The certainty of being able to return to the city at an early hour in the evening, added to the charming weather, induced a larger number of New Yorkers to visit "the Branch" on the second day than had honored it with their distinguished presence on Tuesday, the steamers Plymouth Rock and Jesse Hoyt being well laden with precious human freight, both masculine and feminine. The unfortunate devotees of fashion doomed for a time to make their abiding place at this seaside resort, there to be tormented by unconscionable landlords and bled by myriads of Jersey mosquitos with most ravenous appetites, likewise emerged from their cubby holes, and in all the glory of gorgeously caparisoned four and six-in-hand, dashing pairs and elegant equipages, wended their way to the race track. The opening event was the race for named in honor of the prominent member only of the histrionic profession who take up their habitation at the Branch during the summer solstice. It was for two year olds, for $500, added to a sweepstakes of $50 each, three-quarters of a mile, second horse to receive $200 and the third $100 out of the stakes. Nineteen entries had been made, but of these only six started, viz., Malita, ch f by King Lear, Richard Roe, Experience Oaks, br f by Eclipse and Hubbard. The last named was a strong favorite; Malita having second place in the pool selling, and the Eclipse filly being next fancied. At the signal Malita dashed off in the van, Hubbard and Roe following close at her heels, the Eclipse filly fourth. The favorite was going along nicely, but, to the consternation and disgust of his backers, his jockey pulled him after covering about fifty yards and Oaks and Roe closing in he was thrown behind, and large odds were offered against him. The filly by Eclipse went by the half mile pole ahead, Oaks next, Malita third and Hubbard bringing up the rear. In this order the home-stretch was entered, but now the rider of the favorite let her out, and shooting by Oaks, he collared the leader and finished a very exciting race three-quarters of a length to the good, the Eclipse filly second, and Hubbard third, two lengths behind. ### Introductory Overture.

THE THESPIAN STAKES,

MONDAY, Aug. 7th, '71.

In the way of amusement during the past week there is but little to record, there being a dearth of novelty or freshness, and nothing really attractive in a dramatic point of view; but the offerings were commensurate with the patronage, the theatres presenting quite a sad and debilitating appearance. It made us sick to witness the very light and solemn condition of our auditoriums—it must have made the performers feel still more qualmish, while the trusting and ill requited managers must have experienced the pains and penalties of quite a combination of ills; the weather, which, for a week or two previous, had been cool and comfortable, inviting strangers and tarry-at-homers to partake of the theatrical pabulum prepared for their entertainment, changed to a torrid temperature, and during the entire week indoor recreations could not be endured with any degree of self respect or complacency, and the consequences was that the sea-side and rural retreats benefitted at the expense of the theatres. Treasurers, door-tenders, ushers and other officials in front had a comparatively easy thing of it, and could chat with a lively dead head without incurring the displeasure of the genial proprietor.....For the current week we have not much to brag of, the dramatic temples attempting to play it out on the previous week's programmes; but next week will witness the preliminary skirmishing of the advance guard in anticipation of a general action along the whole line. On the east side, Mr. J. Riggs will give us, for the first time on any stage, his new play entitled "Shin Fane," a sensational and deeply absorbing dramatic invention from the pen of John F. Poole. This latest novelty will find utterance, as we say in the classics, at the old Bowery, whose old time walls will echo with many a pinadit, and the welkin ring again with the enthusiastic endorsement of the bone and sinew of the metropolis. Should "Shin Fane" make the hit that is expected to, there will be many an aspirant for the honor of playing Poole. At the West End—you see how we gradually fall into the London style—we are to have the gushing Lotta; and at Wallack's the fascinating Lydia Thompson will inaugurate a new campaign, for which she has enlisted the services of a small regiment of fresh recruits, while some of the old time liners will renew their acquaintance and assist the gay and dashing Thompson in presenting a number of novelties in the burlesque way. There is a great desire to see and hear the new comers, and we shall not be surprised to witness a very large attendance at their burlesque performances, for the Thompson troupe have achieved a great reputation in that specialty, and Lydia's name alone "is a tower of strength." Lines in honor of the re-appearance of the favorites:—

Oh, joyous, pretty Lydia,
We wish you were a widdy-er,
All forlorn;
We'd present ourselves before you,
For really we adore you—
"Eating corn."

In accents soft and mild
We'd tell our love so wild,
If we'd permission
And vow eternal truth,
A ratish thing, forsooth,
In the commission.

From week to week, should no unforseen obstacle interpose to prevent, the continuation of this thrillingly moral concatenation of lines and rhymes will be given, for which we claim the forgiveness of our much afflicted readers.....A supe, a friend of "Our Jim's," who had bravely borne the brunt of many a mimic stage battle, likewise carried off table and chairs with perfect decorum and gentlemanly bearing, was recounting to our boy the many dramatic productions in which he had participated, and among the rest depicted in glowing and supe-rior terms the soul-stirring incidents of "William Tell, the Hero of Switzerland." The youthful James listened with extended ears and open mouth to the story, at the conclusion of which he calmly remarked:—"Well, that's about the greatest 'Tell' tale I ever listened to."

.....We have had the introductory performance of the minstrel season of 1871-2, Kelly and Leon's troupe leading off in the commencement. What is to be the reception of minstrel entertainments during the approaching season, it is difficult to conjecture at this time. Certainly, last year did not leave a very fair exhibit, a variety of circumstances tending to cast Ethiopians in the shade, let us hope for a time only. It is the prevailing opinion, however, that minstrelsy has seen its best days, and that unless some new life is infused in the programmes selected, and novelties of an unusually attractive character presented, there can be but little if any improvement in the prospects of the black boards. We should not advise our friends of the mock colored persuasion to insist upon high rates of admission; they will have a very strong legitimate and illegitimate drama opposed to them, and if minstrel prices are not moderately low the weaker element must suffer in the competition for public favor; and if four troupes take up their quarters here for the season, as it is said they will, then there must be a still further reduction of the chances of minstrel managers growing rich. We shall probably have for the opening of the campaign the San Francisco Minstrels, Kelly and Leon's, Bryant's, and Newcomb and Arlington's; rather more, we fear, than the law allows for even the metropolis. However, all signs fail in a dry season, it is said, and a revival in minstrelsy may be one of the unlooked-for results of the new term. Let us hope so, at all events.....We have great respect for that much abused, but all important personage, the property man. If ever a stage hand earned his bread and butter by the sweat of his brow, truly that hand is the man of property. He's got to be on hand, with all his little props arranged in apple-pie order for the business of the evening, and should he fail to have the banquet duly prepared at the appointed time, better he had been a victim of the wildest explosion than of the managerial outburst. We propose to speak a gratifying piece about

YE PROPERTY MAN.

He furnishes the galling chain
That moody captives wear,
The golden (?) tankards that contain
Refreshing draughts of air.
If he should cease his watchful toil,
The whole performance stops,
The players know they can't keep up
Unless that fellow keeps.

He gives the lover tin-kling coin
With which to pay his dues,
And for the drowsy sentinel
A musket he must use.
If in a hurry he is told
A picture is required,
He's in a minute sure he has
The medicine desired.

He gives the ladies tea to smoke
Who cannot use the "weed,"
And hands the leading man the "foils"
With which he foils the deed.
To make an ancient battle scene
The armor, bright, he brings,
Both cuirass and breastplate, too,
And many curious things.

Appearing on the nimble stage
He does not care about,
Although, at times, he "lends his voice"
To help along a "shout."
A greater share of good than ill,
We trust that he may see,
And may he find himself at last
A man of property!

Our respected old friend, who has passed the greater portion of his life up in the flies, desires to have a chance to offer a few remarks on the brink of the incoming season, relative to the drama as it is, and as it isn't. Therefore, we call the attention of our readers to this latest bulletin from

THE MAN IN THE FLIES
ON FLUCTUATIONS IN DRAMATIC TASTE.

To Mister Frank Queen.—Dear Sir.—When we thro a summersett as it were onto ourselves and take a retrospective glance at the past, how often sir we reminded of that ole fashioned saying, "vanity of wannity, all is wanities." I think I remember the time, now hoit too yers ago, when Mister [illegible] galvinized the town into a Shakspereian fever, and all the hair of all the blond haircasse stood hup on their eds at the mention of his speotlik, and all the "eds" of all the newspapers was devoted to the same subject exclosive', and Mr. Grant White co was so frienzed at the prospect of a carnival of legs that a almost went into conniption fits at the idee, went in fur givin' of a gran bankit to the managers out of pure gratitiood for the hoalsom reflomashin which e ad interdooced. Too yers, and what a change! I think the revivle business in most cases lasted about three months, when most of the she folks found out that the public are a great pig-headed monster what don't care a cent for reform so long as it kan get its regilar skorns. Or preps it mite be more properer to call it a Hydrer headed monster, with ever so many heds and a separate taste for every one of the heds. Owever this mite be, their prognostifications all proved at wariance with the fact. Ere and there some conscious stricken manager as rushed frantickly before the publick with Richard or Ofella bashed up as spectickles, but it was no go, and with a sigh they relinquish their empty benches and returned to burlesk and full houses. Even Mister Wallick, com owns the moddil theatre in America, retired in to pots and to dosse, while another invadin army, bedded by Lydey Tompson, comes marchin over from England, with trumpets blowin', banners flyin, and boldly places out its legitimizers and takes possession of its citadeel. Thim may accomplish for the time the tragedy of life, sir, after all this hallibaloo, bust me if I don't think the publics are right. Why, sir, any body as lives likes a little full-bodied port and a cut of solid rosa beef, as most any body likes to hev a good sermon, but oo wants to live exclosair on rosa beef and good sermons. Shell we have no moar cakes and ales? Shell we have no moar champane and oysters on the baf shell? Why, old Shakesy himself, if e did write "Macbeth," ad a rollickin' humor, and use to revell into such shoo peeces as the Tempest and the Midsummer Nights' Dreme—which I will stake for enny thing that as ever been invent in the me low dramatick line. Bekos there is a Carlisle or a Emerson shall we have no Dickenses or Dumasses, or Artemis Wards? Poopoo, nonsens! And it is all a mistake, sir, to suppose that this illegitimate dreammy business, as one might call it in conterdistinction, isn't as hard to sustain as what they calr the more laborious walks of tragedy. Has Shakesy says:—

"There bee some sports are painful, and their labor
Deitie in them sets off, some kinds of baseness
Are nobly undergone, and most poor matters
Point to rich ends. This my mannie task
Would bee as heavy to me as odious, but
The mistress wich I serve quickens what's ded,
And makes me labors pleasures—"

The "mistress" bein' of cours the fickle publick.

Wot says my nobel Prospero? after recitin of all the wonderfle things that e could do, says he:—

"But this rough magick
I here abjure; and when I hav requir'd
Some heavenly music, (witch erven now I do,)
To work mine end upon their senses, that
This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff,
Bury it certain fathoms in the earth,
And, deeper than did ever plummet sound,
I'll drowne my book."

And, one after the other the managers 'as been breakin' on their managerial staffs accordin'. You 'see' their is a old eg-and about a man with a magick pipe which attracts a court full of nursed pundicks, oom coodn't a bin surprised into a laff and wood as soon thought on flyin to the moon as of jinin in a jig. Yit this stranger ad no sooner commenced to play upon is big pipe when the court oslfers broke into a walk around, and all the lawyers they jined in too, and the wenerable judges and the jewry, they cope down and struck in too, and such a time you never did see. And that's jus wots a goin' on now. In the place of all our gammon about the legitimit and all that, enter the stranger with is magick pipe, and pitches the toon, and we all go off into a canaan as vehementiously as if our lives depended onto it. Sir, the man wot would blush at a 'amoone or a turnip, and wood faint at the sight of the Wenus of Medicine should be unwalled to im. I knows some of the paddies of the different houses to be among the most exemplary and wirtuous of our cittizens, oom, lord knows, 'as their failins and shouldn't pint at others as they pass.

"Bee thou as pure as ice, as chaste as snow,
Thou shalt not 'scape calomel."

And that oon blondes are chased about by the brawless gallants oo zoos for their favors everybody knows, and that they sumtimes gets sood for their pertinacity are chally sertin. Hup in my cyrrie 'ere I can sumtimes see em heryegassin' the chicest beauties ov the establishment, with their backs towards me, and one leg in a Bacchanal Grotto, with the fireworks a fizzin' and a spluttrin' around 'em, and the orjens a plaudin' and the muscle a flutin', and the cheesy conductor a gettin' frantic with 'is magic batong. Fore gaudens! All is wanity and wexation of spirit for them. Indeed. The public demands this sort of thing and the actors must give it 'em. But take that gal off her painted clouds, and take 'er out of 'er gauze and pink tights, and follow 'er to 'er 'ome, and you will find her fullfillin' ov 'er part in the great domestic farce in a manner as just like any oo profe s to be lifted a peg higher in the soshal scail and yet ain't a bit better than she. Mcnewhile "the dance goes on," and, while the legitimit 'as 'er chosen tempies and 'er apeshal worshippers, the mask of Comus shall continuer to be sellebrated and Midas shall be the Master of the Revels. IN THE FLIES.

City Summary.

AT WOOD'S MUSEUM, during the past week, at the evening perf rmances, the "Ticket-of-Leave Man" has been performed, with G. C. Boniface in the role of Bob Brierly, which he acted with much feeling. Frank Evans played Hawkshaw, the detective, in a quiet, natural manner; J. Leslie Gossin's impersonation of Jem Dalton was deserving of commendation; A. H. Sheldon created considerable mirth by his acting of Green Jones; H. H. Wilder was gentlemanly and satisfactory as Mr. Gibson; J. J. Wallace made a feature of Melter Moss, which he acted and made up artistically; G. C. Charles gave importance to Maithy by making it a quaint character; Miss Alice Athertone impressed us favorably by her portraiture of the wild youth Sam Willoughby, to which character her figure was admirably adapted—she possesses ability which only requires practice and opportunity to fully develop; Miss Lizzie Forrest's impersonation of May Edwards was only fair; Mrs. Willoughby found an excellent representative in Mrs. Rynar, and Miss Alice Harrison acted Emily St. Evermond with spirit and vivacity. This powerfully constructed drama has attracted a fair average attendance. At the usual matinees, save Saturday, the John L. Hall Burlesque Troupe has acted in the burlesque of "La Sonnambula." "David Garrick" is announced for this evening.

AT TONY PASTOR'S, George W. Thompson commenced the second and last week of his engagement, acting in the "Mountain King" and the "Dutchman's Ghost," on Monday and Tuesday evenings. On Wednesday evening the "King of Scotland" and "Handy Andy" were performed. On Thursday, "Sampson Hardhead," "Brian O'Linn" and the "Persecuted Dutchman" constituted the bill. On Friday, for Mr. Thompson's benefit, the "Veteran," "Widow's Victim" and the "Mountain Sylve" were performed. On Saturday evening the "Mountain King," "Brian O'Linn," "Middy Ashore" and the "Dutchman's Monkey" were acted for the closing bill of Mr. Thompson's engagement. The attendance has been fair for the season of the year. This evening, Aug. 7th, the "Dead Boxer" is to be presented.

SOL. SMITH RUSSELL, the excellent facial artist, who has been in the city during the past week enjoying the hospitalities of his personal friends, left the city to-day, Aug. 7th, for Boston, Mass., where he will play a short engagement, commencing Aug. 14th. He will travel with the Berger Family during the coming season.

T. G. RIGGS, who has won considerable reputation by his admirable acting of Irish characters, is to commence an engagement at the Bowery Theatre on Aug. 14th, when he will act in a new and original drama entitled "Shin Fane; or, Shamrock Green," which has been written expressly for him by that popular and experienced dramatist, Mr. John F. Poole. It is said to be a play of absorbing interest, with a well told story, strongly defined characters and by no means a one part piece. It contains several startling sensational effects, which are novel, and we are assured that they have nothing to do with railroads; the drama is so constructed that it can be played with or without them, which assures us that it must possess merit. Mr. Riggs will play Sull Gair, who assumes four other character changes, as follows:—Con, a simpleton, not such a fool neither; Tinkering Tim, a rare specimen; Mrs. Hanlon, a N. Y. boarding-house keeper; and Mr. Maguire, a ready made citizen.

JAMES M. WARD continued to act during the past week at the Bowery Theatre, in McCloskey's sensational drama, "Through by Daylight," which was preceded by the farce of the "Dead Shot." J. H. Milburn, character vocalist and dancer, commenced an engagement on July 31st, appearing in the concert and saloon scene in the second act, singing the "Nolay Swell" and "You Should See My Sarah," and dancing a Lancashire hornpipe, all of which were received with great favor. Lord and Waldron performed a double song and dance, and Tom Bolas sang a number of Dutch songs. The average attendance of the week has been good. Mr. Ward concluded his engagement with the performances of Saturday evening last. It has been one of the most successful of the summer season. This evening, August 7th, a new drama, entitled "Nita: or, The Sewing Machine Girl," is announced for production.

KELLY AND LEON, on Monday evening, July 31st, commenced a season of minstrelsy at their old hall, No. 720 Broadway, which had been occupied for some time past for dramatic purposes, and known as Lina Edwin's Theatre, which title has been retained by them. We published a full list of the performers in our past issue, and now we will speak of their performances. The curtain rising, a certain disclosed fifteen performers, neatly costumed in black suits, with white vests, black neck-ties and a small boquet in the buttonhole of the left lappel of the coat. There was a sextet of voices, four instrumentalists and a pianoforte upon the stage. The only novelty that characterized the first part was the closing feature, "Carry the News, Mary," in the performance of which all of them united. It savored strongly of the old time plantation songs, and as it had never before been performed upon the Broadway side of the town and possesses real merit, it met with a favorable reception. The jokes of the end men were not new and lacked wit, although the manner in which they were delivered raised an occasional laugh. Although the songs were familiar, we will, as this was the commencement of a season, recount them for the purpose of record. H. Nichols sang acceptably "Softly Fall the Silvery Moonbeams!" Dave Wilson gave the very ancient "Zu Lauterback;" Edwin Kelly's tenor voice was heard to excellent advantage in "Good Bye to Sorrow," which he sang with much expression; Billy Rice, who made his first appearance, sang "Oh! My Love's Gone," so comically that it was re-demanded and conceded; T. L'Estrange sang "Meet Me at Twilight," but was evidently suffering from hoarseness, which marred its effect. The second part contained some novelties which were highly successful, and to which we will refer in the order they occurred upon the programme. Leon opened this part with "Par Excellence," which was loudly applauded; in response to which he gave an imitation of a German prima donna, which created much mirth, and won a recall, when he performed a dance, at the conclusion of which he was re-called, but simply bowed his thanks. Leon is a clever artist and a great favorite, and was most cordially welcomed upon his re-appearance. We noticed a marked improvement in his make up his face. He used barely a tinge of color, which allows his facial expression to be clearly witnessed by the audience. A Spanish guitarist, Don Pedro Dorrego by name, succeeded him. He appeared without color upon his face, and his instrument was a novel one. At the left of the usual four strings were some thirteen others reaching only to the top of the body of the guitar, and bent in half harp-like shape. He is a master of the instrument and performed several difficult selections in a thoroughly artistic manner, and we unhesitatingly pronounce him one of the finest performers upon the guitar that ever appeared in this country. He was most vociferously applauded and responded in a cheerful manner to four encores. This performance was followed by a medley clog dance by H. T. Mudge, which was marked by activity and distinguished for correctness of time and the great variety of steps introduced; it deservedly won an encore. An old time sketch called "Time Tries All," with Billy Rice, J. K. Campbell, Cool White and J. B. Carter in the cast, followed this, but it requires no special comment. A double song and dance by Devere and Nelson, entitled "Flora Anna Bell," was fairly performed. J. K. Campbell sang, with his own banjo accompaniment, some familiar songs and then executed a brief dance accompanying himself at the same time upon his banjo. The performance concluded with a farce called "Thrice Married," being taken from Wright Paul's petite comedy of "Thrice Married," in which Leon acted the triple roles of Carlotta, Signorina Monter, a Spanish dancer, and Mlle. Victorine le Page, a French prima donna. Uncle Jack was played by Edwin Kelly; Uncle Horace by Dave Wilson, and Vivian Ripple by Cool White. For the present week, the only novelty announced is a petite comedy, or farce, entitled "The Relief of the Kitchen," which has been somewhat elaborated on the other side of the water by the performance therein of the Vokes Family, but as their peculiar performances consist of, among other things, grotesque dances, similar to those performed by the Mollitons, we fear the piece has little to do with their performances, and will therefore have to stand upon its own merits as a dramatic production. Besides this, the only change announced in the programme is an act entitled "Tricks Upon Travelers," which will be performed by J. K. Campbell and Billy Rice. On the opening night the auditorium was crowded in every part, many people were turned away, and the business continued good during the week. Whether the season will prove successful will depend entirely upon the management. The public require novelty, and if it is not given they will abstain from attending. One or two novel acts upon a programme will not answer. Change the whole of it, and if good so will be the patronage. If performers will not work to supply fresh acts, supply their places with those that will, and we think the treasury will speedily show which is the best course to pursue.

AT NIBLO'S GARDEN the attendance of the past week was good, save on Friday evening, when the heat of the day and the showers of the evening had a tendency to diminish the attendance. "Across the Continent," with Oliver Doud Byron in the leading role, continued the attraction. On the afternoon and evening of Saturday, August 12th, J. A. Zimmerman, the treasurer of this theatre during the winter season, and, we believe, the sole manager thereof during the present summer season, is to be the recipient of a benefit, when it is expected that his friends will rally in full force. Those performances will close the summer season. The house will remain closed one week, and on August 21st the regular season will be inaugurated, when Joseph K. Emmet will commence an engagement and act in Charles Gayler's successful drama entitled "Frits."

C. B. BISHOP, comedian, was in the city during the past week.

J. NORTON, leading man, arrived in the city the past week from Montreal, C. E., where he has been acting for some time past. He is engaged the approaching season at Booth's Theatre.

O. A. MCKANUS is engaged for the season of 1871-2 at the Globe Theatre, Boston, Mass.

STUART ROBSON left his villa by the sea at Cohasset, Mass., and paid a flying visit to this city during the past week. He will travel as a star during the season ensuing.

THE GLOBE THEATRE is announced to be opened for the season on Aug. 21st. It is announced that during the recess the auditorium has been painted, restovated and redecorated, and the stage has been enlarged. The usual matinees will be given on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

JOHNNY ALLEN has been acting during the past week at the Olympic Theatre to really paying audiences, the average business having been better than usual at this season. When it is borne in mind that it is the policy of the management of this theatre to issue no free admissions, the press only excepted, it will be readily understood that although the audiences do not entirely fill the auditorium, the returns of the box office show possibly a larger amount of cash received than may be the case at other theatres where the same course is not so rigidly pursued, and, consequently, the audiences appear larger. On this evening, August 7th, a re constructed version of "Schneider" is to be acted. The author, Mr. J. J. McClosky, finding that his several dramas have stood the test of a public ordeal, is turning his attention at the present time to re-writing them, changing the language somewhat, curtailing here and there, and lengthening the successful situations and excerpting those which the public receive with apathy.

A CHANGE will shortly be made in the programme at Wallack's Theatre. "Elfie," although successful, must be withdrawn, owing to a prior engagement made with the Lydia Thompson Burlesque Troupe, who will shortly return from England bringing one or two of the familiar faces and several new ones. A new burlesque, or rather a new version of an old one, has been prepared and the artists and carpenters of this theatre have been busy for some time since in preparing a stage setting, which shall be in keeping with the reputation of this theatre. The attendance for the season of the year has been good, though a falling off was noticeable on the very warm nights.

MISS ROSA HERSEE sailed for London, Eng., per steamship Atlantic on July 5th, having been engaged by cable telegram to sing at the Grand English Opera at St. James' Theatre, in that city, commencing September 30th next. Miss Hersee informs us that it is probable that at no distant day she may re-visit this country at the head of an opera troupe under her own management.

"RITA PERCY," writes one of our correspondents, "was recently married to Waterbury, a waterbury, a retired English sea captain, reputed to be very wealthy. In a last advices the happy couple were traveling through Japan." Mrs. Waterbury, it will be remembered, opened in the statuary business in this city about the same time as Jem Mace did.

MISS LILLIE ELDRIDGE having made a success at the Park Theatre, Brooklyn, in her new play of "Alma," has already been engaged for Boston, St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans, Galveston, Richmond, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Buffalo, Rochester and Albany.

MME. LOUISE LICHTMAY, the German prima donna, has generously tendered her own services and her entire company to give an operatic performance for the benefit of the sufferers by the Westfield disaster.

CHARLES FECHTER has purchased the property known as the Fourteenth Street Theatre, and will remodel the building and enlarge the stage, for which purpose the two dwelling houses on Fifteenth street will probably be absorbed. It is expected that it will be ready for opening early in November.

MISS ADA HARLAND will commence an engagement at Wood's Museum, Aug. 21st, when she will act in a new play entitled "Lola," which has been written expressly for her. Miss Harland is booked for engagements through the country during the coming season.

MISS JEAN BURNSIDE, who made quite a successful debut at the Union League Theatre as a recitationist, will, it is said, shortly make her debut upon the dramatic stage at one of our metropolitan theatres.

WILLIAM CRESWICK has been engaged to act at Booth's Theatre during Miss Charlotte Cushman's engagement.

"HUMPTY DUMPTY," which enjoyed such an extended run when first produced at the Olympic Theatre, will be the opening attraction of the fall and winter season, which will probably commence August 28th. G. L. Fox will be the clown, C. K. Fox the pantaloon; there will be two harlequins and two columbines, impersonated by the Kiralfy brothers and sisters; Signorina Bertoldi and M'lle Morlondo, premier danseuses, from La Scala, Milan; M'lle Alexandrowa, a star dancer, from St. Petersburgh, Russia; the Martin Family, who perform a variety of droll acts; a quartet of performing dancers, called the "Zig Zags," who perform an eccentric act entitled "The Insects; or, Human Insects;" two little velocipede performers, Young Adonis, aged four years, and Little Venus, aged two and a half years; Signor Caselli, from the principal European capitals, and ten premier danseuses for the Kiralfy troupe, will be found among the incidental attractions.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 718 Broadway, is prepared to negotiate engagements for the following artists, and to receive applications for engagements at the theatres mentioned below:—The Cooke family—John Henry, Harry Welby, Emilie Henrietta and Rosina—equestrians; Monsieur, equestrienne and actress; Eliza Weatherly, burlesque actress; the Coleman children, musical and dramatic prodigies; Dollie Bidwell, star comedienne; Mme. Ivan C. Michels, first old women, heavies, etc., who has just arrived from Europe; Ed. Banker, minstrel and variety artist; H. C. Burton and Minnie Rainforth, double Zouave drillists, etc.; James M. Ward, actor; J. H. Laine, advance agent, and E. B. Brown, business manager, who is wanted for the Howard Athenæum, Boston, and Tony Denier's Capitol Theatre, Albany, N. Y. Mons. Blandowski, ballet master, states that he is engaged for nine months. For further particulars see advertisements.

A BENEFIT PERFORMANCE in aid of the sufferers by the Westfield explosion is announced to occur at the Harlem Music Hall on Wednesday evening, Aug. 16th. Ladies and gentlemen of the profession who may see fit to volunteer their services can send their addresses to George W. Haines, whose address can be found in our advertising columns.

M. W. LEFFINGWELL has been engaged to play Sadlove in "Elfie" at Wallack's, in place of J. H. Stoddart, who has withdrawn to fulfil other engagements.

RIGGS & FITZGERALD, dramatic agents, 681 Broadway, have a purchaser for a second-hand magic lantern, and Lucy Myers and Elodie Larlene can be engaged through them.

HARRY CUNNINGHAM, dramatic agent, 636 Broadway, has for sale a 100 feet round top canvas, and he would like to hear from first-class variety artists. See advertisement.

MISS JENNY HUGHES, a pleasing vocalist, is engaged at the Globe Theatre for the approaching season.

Dramatic.

LINES ON THE DEATH OF LIZZIE (WIFE OF T. G. RIGGS), WHO DIED JUNE 8TH, 1871.

BY A LADY FRIEND.

In the early summer days,
When birds sang in sweetest tone,
Tenderly they bore her form
To her own loved childhood's home.
Only six short years before,
As a trusting happy bride,
She had left that cottage door
At her loving husband's side.

Six brief years have sped away
On wings of peace and harmony;
Adding to her joys each day,
To her girlish purity;
And when, in that loving breast,
Nestled there a cherub boy,
She did not ask to be more blest;
Her heart had room for no more joy.

But the fairest things of earth
Are blighted by the spoiler's hand;
And that bright domestic hearth,
That doubly happy house hold band
Has been broken, and alone
The stricken husband stands to-day,
His loved one gone—forever gone—
To a land far away.

So young, so full of hope and joy,
All was lost in one sad hour;
Why, oh, why, should death destroy
Such a lovely, tender flower?
Twenty-five summers scarce had sped
O'er her fair and girlish brow;
Her birthday came*—that lovely head,
Cold and still in death, lay low.

And little Tony, precious boy,
Idol of his mother's heart,
All her pride, her love, her joy!
Who will act a mother's part?
Who will love as she has loved?
Who will guide with gentle hand?
Now the mother has been borne
To the silent, far-off land!

God will watch with loving care,
O'er the little motherless one,
In his hand the boy He'll bear;
He will cheer the saddened home;
And, the lost one, though at rest,
In the heaven we will see her,
Leans on the Holy Mother's breast.
Secure from harm, from sin, from fears.

Rest in peace, departed one,
In thy grave on the green hill side.
Joyful be thy resurrection,
We cannot say "Our Lizzie died."
While we walk in shadow here
'Mid earth's toil and care and pain,
One thought will cheer the failing tear,
'Tis this.—Our loss has been thy gain.

* She died the day preceding her twenty-sixth birthday.

It will be seen by a card in our advertising columns that the company is requested to be in Chicago by August 21st, to attend rehearsals, preparatory to the opening of the season.

NED SMITH, comedian, who is engaged with J. C

were closed. In consequence of these proceedings the theatre remained closed until last night (Thursday) 3d, when it was again opened. It appears that in the interim Mr. Davis has had recommendations from nearly all his neighbors that his place be licensed, and armed with these, he applied to the mayor once again for the coveted permit, only to be again refused. Acting under legal advice, he then tendered the amount of the license to the mayor and proceeded to renew his performances. If again disturbed he proposes to test the question whether he can be refused a license, and, at the same time, be punished for performing without one. The only new appearances last evening beyond the company of last week were Charles Coriell and Belle Williams in their specialties, who achieved a fine success. Mr. Coriell reached here Monday and on Tuesday morning his little daughter died very suddenly.....Judge Wilson, of the police court, has decided that only concerts which charge admission at the door are compelled to have licenses. Taking advantage of this holding, all the halls in the German part of the city have re-commenced their Sunday performance without any admission charge.....Ned Reed has left the Apollo, and on Monday was succeeded by Lon Gardner, banjoist, who only played one night, however, when he received notice that his wife was ill in Pittsburgh, and left for that city on Tuesday. Mr. C. Aiken, a robust balladist, began at the Apollo on Tuesday, making a very violent hit.....The Brighton Varieties shut up doors at the close of last week, the pressure of the weather being rather too heavy. The other halls have been doing only tolerably and there are no other changes to note."

AT THE OLYMPIC THEATRE, Chicago, Ill., says our correspondent who wrote on Aug. 4th:—"Frank Dillon's testimonial benefit on Friday last proved a bumper. In addition to the regular company, several volunteers appeared. Miss Josephine Walby brought her engagement to a close on Saturday evening, and departed on Monday for Washington. Mr. Fernando Fleury, Mr. Lew Wallace and Miss Helen Revere comprise the new appearances this week. Mr. Fleury's character songs are highly successful. The accordeon playing of Lew Wallace is nightly received with applause. Miss Revere's champion jig is neatly executed, and is much admired. The other prominent features of the bill consists of a capitally rendered duet by Clara Butler and Nellie Clifford, a very laughable act by Frank Frayne and Neil Rogers, styled 'Hard Cheek,' a ballad by Nellie Clifford, sweetly sung, and double song and dance, 'The Apple of my Eye,' by Bowman and Harris, which is one of the features of the performance. Miss Clara Butler next appears in choice musical selections which captivate the audience. Neil Rogers does the 'essence' in his best style. The sketch of 'A Trip Around Chicago' affords Frank Frayne an opportunity to display his talents. Frank Dillon opens in Cleveland next week."

CONCERNING THE performances at the variety halls in Peoria, Ill., our correspondent sends the following under date of August 4th:—"The proprietor of the Varieties, having got ready for the fall and winter campaign sooner than was expected, re-opened that establishment on July 29th, and was greeted with an overwhelming house, and business has been good ever since. The following are the people now engaged:—Miss Adelia Smith, vocalist and character actress; Miss Minnie Estelle, German songstress; Mrs. Mitchfield, danseuse; Jimmy Grimo, clog, and dance; John Murphy, general business and bone soloist; Harry Thompson, Dutch comedian, and stage manager. Sprague and Mack have been engaged and will make their first appearance on the 8th.....The Theatre Comique continues to draw good houses. On the 1st inst., La Belle Helene made her bow before a Peoria audience, and was well received. Her make-up is good, and her jigs and clog dances are better than the average of female performers. Harry Blood has taken the bone end in place of Mr. Clannon. Mr. Allen, in his songs, dances and jigs, is a great favorite. Miss Kitty Whitland, in her character acts, never fails to secure an encore. In fact, the entire company is the best we have had in Peoria for some time. Mr. Bucklin, on the night of his benefit, 24th ult., was the recipient of a silver medal, of the value of $25, from his friends. The re-engagement of Miss Lulu Cullum has given satisfaction to the patrons of this house. She has good control of her voice and her stage manner is unexceptionable. She appears at the Olympic, Chicago, Aug. 14th, for two weeks, and at Metropolitan Hall, Washington, D. C., Aug. 28th, for the fall and winter season. Manager Schultz was the recipient of a rousing benefit this evening."

FROM INDIANAPOLIS, IND., our correspondent, "Vagrantes," writes under date of 3d of August:—"The Metropolitan Theatre is attracting large audiences. Eunice Dunlap and Maud Howard are excellent exponents of the terpsichorean art, and Fanny Wood, Emma Morton, Nellie Seymour and Ada St. Clair are well received in their respective songs. Tom Williams, Charlie Adams, Harry Wood and Ned Reed receive their share of applause as comedians and singers, and the Clark Brothers do the trapeze. It should be especially noticed that Mr. Harry Wood gives a separate entertainment, a la Lingard, quite equaling the original in his rapidity of changes. Joe Moll and Charles Kemble have left the company and formed a combination for variety business, commencing in St. Louis, Mo."

AT THE BALTIMORE OPERA HOUSE, Baltimore, Md., during the past week the chief features were as follows:—The Misses Lizzie Louise Davis, Mazori Arnoldi, Minnie Gray, Nellie Young, Fanny May, Belle Gray and Millie Carolista, Messrs. Milier Beall, John Mulligan, George Warren, Larry Tooley, Charles O. White and John Franklin. Mons. Blandowski's ballet troupe performed in an operatic burlesque and ballet, entitled "Grand Canvas," the solo dances by the Holt Sisters, Julia Sanford, Polly Barrett and Miss Frank Christy. The following performers are announced to appear on August 7th:—Charley Gardiner and son, the Kiralfy Sisters, Amelia and Katherine; also, Miss Lizzie Walker.

SANFORD'S NEW OPERA HOUSE, Philadelphia, Pa., will be opened for the season on Aug. 26th, and artists desiring engagements are requested to address as per card elsewhere.

HARRY ROBINSON, eccentric comedian, etc., who has several specialties, and who can be addressed care of this office, will be prepared to accept of engagements after Sept. 2d.

MILBURN, the protean comique, is prepared to accept engagements, and can be addressed as per card elsewhere.

A LADY ORGANIST, a danseuse and a violin player are wanted for Stewart and Lane's New York Serenaders. Address W. H. Stewart, as per advertisement.

THE METROPOLITAN HALL, at Washington, still the only place of amusement open in the city, did an excellent business last week. The only new face was that of Mr. Neil Conway, Irish comedian, clog dancer, etc. In the first part of the olio he appeared in an Irish jig, and then later in the evening in a rattling clog dance, in both of which he met with a good reception and was very liberally applauded. In addition to his abilities as a dancer, Mr. Conway is a clever contortionist. His engagement will continue for two or three weeks, and then when the Brooklyn Opera House season commences he will open there. Minnie and Emma Clare appear in double dances, and Miss Maggie is beginning to make her mark as a vocalist. They may also go to Brooklyn, and after that to the Pacific slope. Maggie Nichols' performance upon the slack wire is exceedingly well done, and is really one of the features of the entertainment. George Thatcher, one of the funniest end men seen in this section in a long time, is gaining in popularity. He impersonates a variety of characters in several humorous farces. James Gaynor is a tip top banjoist; he is rightly subjected to a most an endless number of encores, and some of his songs are well adapted to the style of the entertainment. Amy De Brent, vocalist, did not commence on the 31st ult., but will positively on the 7th inst. So writes our correspondent, "Novice."

THE SCENERY and appurtenances of the Alhambra, Seventh street, below Arch, Philadelphia, were sold at auction on the premises, on Tuesday morning, the 1st inst., the principal purchaser being Mr. C. E. Rollins, formerly the manager of that place of amusement, the sums said to be realized by the sale being very small. On the evening of the 1st inst., Mr. Rollins re-opened the Alhambra with a company consisting of Sage Richardson, Murphy and Egbert, J. W. Egan, Prof. Pharazyn, Geo. L. Hall, Miss Ella and Lea, Miss Lydia Webster and M'lle Leonetta. The attendance during the week was small. On the 7th inst., Miss Emma Alford, serio-comic vocalist; Sidney Franks, comic vocalist, and Fattie Stewart, comedian, will be added to the company, and business will undoubtedly improve. Otto Burbank has been re-engaged, and will appear here on the 10th, when will be inaugurated a series of "family nights," to be given thereafter every Thursday. The Alhambra will be sold at Sheriff's sale on the 7th inst.

AT FIELDING'S NEW OPERA HOUSE, Toledo, O., the chief attractions of the past week were as follows:—Miss Maggie Fielding, vocalist; Miss Mollie Russel, vocalist and dancer; Miss Lillie de Berg, serio-comic; Miss Fannie Valade, song and dance; the Jerome Brothers, clog dancers; Mlle. Patti, dancer; Den Howe and John Fielding, Ethiopian comedians.

HENRY EVERTON, comic and character vocalist, left Detroit, Mich., August 3d, with a company, to perform in Toronto, Ont., Kingston, and Montreal, C. E.

FEMALE MUSICIANS and a comedian who can play brass are wanted for a traveling company. Address Fielding and Cole, as per card elsewhere.

THE WALHALLA TROUPE having entered into a lengthy engagement with R. Fox, of the New American Theatre, Philadelphia, advertise that their services can only be secured through him. They open at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, Mass., on September 4th, for two weeks, after which they have vacant dates.

AT VALER'S WINTER GARDEN, Philadelphia, free instrumental and vocal concerts are given every evening. Miss Mary Frazer and Mlle. Eugenie, danseuses, and Charles Davis, comedian, appeared last week.

FREE EXHIBITIONS were given daily at Smith's Island, opposite Philadelphia, during the past week, when the following appeared:—Mlle. Conchita Gonzetti in her ascensions on the wire and rope. Mons. Caron and children in gymnastic feats, and the Franklin Brothers in their double trapeze act.

THE PHILADELPHIA VARIETIES, after undergoing extensive alterations, will be re opened on the 26th with a company including all the old favorites and strengthened by the addition of several popular artists.

THE ST. JAMES THEATRE, Boston, Mass., is announced to be opened for the regular season on August 14th, under the management of Joseph C. Trowbridge & Co., with the following performers:—The Charles Abbott pantomime company, composed of the following performers:—Chas Abbott, Chas. Criside, Chas. W. Ravel J. B. Howland, J. C. Franklin, Z. Zeltner, T. F. Colling, William Bell. M'lles Sophie Ravel, Emilie Herbert, and Alfred and William Moe, skaters. In addition to this troupe M'lle Millie Turnour, aerial gymnast; M'lle Venturoli, premier danseuse; the Schoker Sisters, Caroline and Gabrielle, dancers; Miss Jennie Engel, serio-comic; Miss Minnie Jackson, burlesque; the Freeman Sisters, sensational vocalistes; Miss Maxeri Arnoldi, character dancer; Harry Bloodgood, comedian; W. B. Cavanagh, character actor; Billy Carter, banjoist; Jerry Cohan, Irish comedian and vocalist; A. J. Leavitt, comedian; the Leslie Brothers, John, Lewis and Frederick, acrobats and gymnasts; Turner and Lester, song and dance; Sam Collins, Dutch comedian; C. L. Pierson, burlesque; William Eunice, versatile performer; John E. Taylor, sensational specialties, and the Daley Brothers, clog dancers. On the 21st Miss Dollie Bidwell, actress, is announced to commence an engagement. The officers of the theatre are as follows:—W. B. Cavanagh, stage manager; J. H. Howard, business manager; Joan F. Courtney, treasurer; Ferd von Oiker, leader of the orchestra; John G. Low, scenic artist; Matthew G. Graham, master carpenter; John Gay, assistant machinist; T. J. Sullivan, properties; Frank Philbrook, gas engineer; Hill and Johnston, sensational sign writers, and W. F. Allen, T. H. Shannon and G. A. Sawin, advertisers. By reference to a card in another column, it will be seen that the company is required to meet for rehearsal on August 13th, comp.

M'LLE SELIN, song and dance; Miss Ida Melville, serio comic; M'lle Lizette, ballad singer; Miss Ada Freeman, character vocalist; John Brassel and Patsey Shea, end men, and Harry Jefferson, interlocutor, comprise the company at the Varieties, Norfolk, Va.

KELLY AND HUGHES received a farewell benefit at John Dexter's Novelty Theatre, Titusville, Pa., on August 4th, and closed their engagement there on the 5th.

AT SQUIRES' OPERA HOUSE, Grand Rapids, Mich., F. D. Harris, motto singer; Nellie Clark, Indian clubs; Annie Williams, song and dance, and Nellie Nelson, vocalist, were the chief attractions of the past week.

BEN HAYES, who managed a variety show at Nordheimer's Hall, Montreal, C. E., after a season of three weeks left suddenly, it is alleged, owing the company their salary and deeply in debt to hotels, carpenters, painters and printers.

THREE LADIES and two end men are wanted for a minstrel troupe. See advertisement.

LON CHAPIN has leased Washington Hall, Scranton, Pa., and will open it as a variety theatre on Aug. 14th. Talent is wanted. See advertisement.

TALENT is wanted for the Varieties Theatre, Peoria, Ill. Address as per card elsewhere.

Negro Minstrelsy.

SAM SANFORD'S COMPANY, from the Opera House, Philadelphia, Pa., is billed to perform at Lambertville, N. J., August 7th; Easton, Pa., 8th; Allentown, 9th; Catasauqua, 10th; Bethlehem, 11th; Trenton, N. J., 12th, where the season will close. His opera house in Philadelphia, Pa., will open August 26th. By a card in our advertising columns it will be seen that ladies and gentlemen of all classes of amusements are wanted.

W. E. MANNING requests us to publish all communications that may be received concerning his recent domestic trouble, and after all the articles, cards, &c., appear that are likely to be drawn forth, he promises to send us a full account of the whole proceedings.

FRANK CARLTON, Ethiopian comedian and song and dance man, and Miss Effie Warren, of Scranton, Pa., were united in marriage at that place during the past week.

JOE WARREN, song and dance artist, advertises that he can be engaged.

SHELBY'S COMIQUE, Buffalo, N. Y., has been nightly filled, since my last letter, notwithstanding the hot weather. J. W. Jester, the man with the Talking Hand, has been one of the principal attractions. The new local extravaganza, entitled "Shan Fan," has proved a success. Next Monday, Aug. 7th, Miss Nellie Whitney, the Buffalo Active Girl, who played here for two weeks at the opening of the Comique, and the song and dance lady, Miss Fannie Valade, are announced to appear. Miss Carrie Avery, who has been a general favorite here, appears at Wild's Opera House, Syracuse, on the 1st of September. One of the greatest attractions at this place, and one deserving of praise, is the orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Frank Martyn, to whom much credit is due for his perseverance and industry.....The city authorities have put a stop to the so-called sacred concerts on Sunday evenings. So wrote our correspondent on August 2d.

THE VARIETIES THEATRE, Pittsburgh, Pa., is announced to open for the season, August 14th, under the continued management of Fred. Aims, and the following performers in the company:—M'lles Mazzire, Leah, Geraldine, Hernandez, the Misses Iona Lang, Celia Ifferd, Messrs. A. M. Hernandez, Arthur Hernandez, Walter Bray, Young America, Joe Lang, Johnny Queen, Hen Mason, Harry Sanwood, Ed. Banker and Mons. Leopold. Fitzsimmons will continue at his post as stage manager, which he filled with much satisfaction during the past season.

BOB HART, who has been alluded to in the Manning case in a somewhat questionable manner, sends us a long letter in regard to that affair, in which he denies every imputation against himself and wife, and says that Mrs. Manning alone conceived and carried to the end the arrangement about the child; that himself and wife have acted as the friends of those parties, etc. Mr. Hart makes some revelations about the family troubles and inclinations of Mr. and Mrs. M., which, for the good of all concerned, we have thought proper to omit. We have given Mr. Hart the privilege of a denial of the charges against him, and there we should prefer the controversy to end, as far as the CLIPPER is concerned.

E. M. KERR, bass singer and interlocutor, advertises that he can be engaged.

BERNARDO, who will travel with the Morris Bros.' Minstrels next season, states that he has fallen heir to over forty thousand dollars.

THE ARTISTS engaged for the Dearborn Minstrels are requested, through a card elsewhere, to assemble for rehearsal at Chicago on Aug. 14th, prior to the opening on the 21st.

TWO YOUNG MEN, who can do song and dance, clog and Irish sketch business, advertise for an engagement.

TALBOTT, EDWARDS AND PARKER'S MINSTRELS are billed to perform in Buffalo, N. Y., during the week commencing August 7th.

DUPREZ & BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS are billed for Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 7th; Decatur, 8th, and Dansville, 9th.

BRYANT'S MINSTRELS performed at Harlem, N. Y., Aug. 8th.

MME RENTZ'S FEMALE MINSTRELS performed in Sidney, Cape Breton, Aug. 2d, 3d and 4th; Cow Bay, 5th; and are billed to play in Baddeck, 7th; Whycogmia, 8th, and Port Hood, 9th.

THE NEW YORK FEMALE MINSTRELS, reorganized, are to perform at New Castle, Pa., August 7th; Youngstown, O., 8th; Niles, 9th and 10th; Sharon, Pa., 11th and 12th; Mercer, 14th; Meadville, 15th and 16th; Franklin, 17th; Oil City, 18th and 19th. The following performers compose the company:—The Hyams Sisters, Jennie and Estella, Miss Ella Clayton, Miss Millie La Fontaine, Miss Maggie Lorretto. Charlie Benedict, Sam. R. Orme and F. A. Tannehill, Manager, William Marsh; treasurer, W. Obey; advance agent, T. F. Scott.

Circuses.

CONCERNING JOHN ROBINSON'S Circus, Menagerie and Museum, of which John F. Robinson, Jr., is the manager and sole proprietor, a correspondent traveling therewith sends the following, dated Davenport, Iowa, July 30th:—"We are using 75-feet canvases—138 feet for circus, 120 feet for menagerie, and 110 feet for museum. The museum consists of a seal, a performing animal; four sea lions, anacondas, rattlesnakes, boa constrictors, buffalo calves and art gallery. The sea lions are doing finely; we keep a fisherman employed so that they may always have fresh fish, and the great expense of this den is fully made up in the attraction it proves to be to the audiences. Since leaving Cincinnati, seven cages have been added, making a menagerie of twenty-three dens. We give twenty acts in the circus, and have been giving three and four shows a day. At Des Moines we gave two in the afternoon and two after dark. Prominent among our performers are Robt. Stickney, little Minnie Marks, Wm. Conrad, Samuel Stickney and wife, John Wilson, colored boy Lewis, and Mrs. John Lawton. Our route is Rock Island, Ill., thence through Illinois to Chicago, for one week, commencing on August 7th; through Indiana to Indianapolis, thence to Louisville, Ky., where we open on the 21th, and from that point we go south. At Louisville we will add three more dens of animals. We have a special train of cars, numbering twenty-two passenger coaches."

THE two ELEPHANTS, mentioned in a recent issue, which arrived in New York for Van Amburgh and Co.'s Golden Menagerie, joined that exhibition at Joliet, Ill., July 29th. While the menagerie was coming to that place on the 29th, about eight miles from that town, the band chariot broke through a bridge, falling some twenty feet, and, although there were some fourteen persons in the chariot at the time, no one was seriously injured, though several were slightly bruised, and Gus Zeim, the leader of the band, had his left arm sprained. The chariot was badly damaged, but was repaired at Joliet.

ROBT. F. STICKNEY publishes in another column a letter to James Melville in relation to the proposed riding contest.

ADAM FOREPAUGH'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE opened in Cincinnati on Wednesday, 2d inst., to a large audience in the afternoon, and a crowded canvas at night, and on the following night the circus was even more densely filled. Our correspondent writes:—"We have probably had better circuses here this season, but the menagerie is by far the largest and most complete that has visited us of late. Of the circus performances, a double two horse act by Abelardo Lowande and Mlle. Henrietta; a leap on horseback, through a hoop of daggers, by Martino Lowande; and the gymnastic feats of the Motley Brothers and others, were among the most noticeable. Several of those billed seemed to be attached to the side shows. Mr. John Robinson, on the 3d inst., entered a suit in the Court of Common Pleas against Adam Forepaugh, in which he claims $48,800 damages, for enticing away from him Cordelia, the splendid young equestrienne, whom Forepaugh knew, as is claimed, to be apprenticed to John Robinson at the time she was induced to go with Forepaugh. This suit is brought under a statute which allows triple the actual damages for wilfully enticing away an apprentice, and will, probably, reveal an interesting chapter in circus history, as there seems to be considerable feeling between these two managers."

GRADY'S CIRCUS gave six exhibitions in Pittsburgh, Pa., commencing July 31st. Our correspondent, writing on Aug. 4th, says:—"Business averaged good. As to the show, it was fair. The pad riding by Mr. Perry, Miss Julia and Frank Morgan, was complimentary. Perry did a four horse bareback act, which elicited considerable applause. The Belmont Brothers, in their dancing globe and posturing acts, were quite clever. The trapeze act by the Miller Brothers was a really excellent performance. Grady and Lawton, clowns, seemed to satisfy the audiences, as all clowns generally do. The greatest attraction connected with the concern was the balloon ascensions made by Prof. Fisher. This is always a free exhibition, and thousands of people will remember it in Pittsburgh. On the evening of the 3d inst., when the balloon had attained an altitude of perhaps 500 feet, with Prof. Fisher, it suddenly dropped into the Allegheny river. Fisher swam to a small sail-boat near by and sustained no injuries. The balloon was but slightly worsted for its plunge. Grady didn't take much 'stock' in street parades. His band, mounted on horseback, and a clown in ring costume, constituted the daily processions. The circus exhibits in Allegheny City on the 3d, 4th and 5th inst."

CIRCUS PERFORMERS, who desire to pass the winter in the south, are referred to a card in our advertising columns, emanating from C. W. Noyes, who proposes to commence a season on or about Oct. 1st.

VAN AMBURGH & CO.'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE, Hyatt Frost manager, is billed to perform at Evansville, Aug. 10th.

THE AGENT of Older's Museum, Circus and Menagerie, sends the route ahead of that show, but neglects to give dates.

VAN AMBURGH & CO.'S GOLDEN MENAGERIE, Henry Barnum manager, is billed to exhibit at Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 10th and 11th.

HAROLD EDWIN, the eldest child of Mrs. Catherine and Harry Welby Cooke, died at Cooke's farm, near Paterson, N. J., July 31st., aged 3 years and 5 months.

SHELDENBURGH AND CO'S COLOSSAL MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS, with Prince D'Jalma, the man serpent, and the great rhinoceros, exhibited at Evansville, Indiana, on Tuesday, August 1st, writes our correspondent on August 2d, "to immense business. In the afternoon the canvas was full, and at night it was crowded to overflowing, at least a thousand people being unable to gain admission. The Van Amburgh Circus and Menagerie had the city heavily billed to exhibit August 10th. The side show connected with this establishment is probably the largest in the country, it having no less than nine centre poles, while among its curiosities are two Circassian girls, Mrs. Ballou, the fat woman, the Van Pelt family of dwarfs, Captain Granville, the giant; Major Littlefinger, the little man; George Payne, the armless wonder; Prof. Costello, the sword swallower, and Spoff Himan, the wizard. The privilege is owned by James De Mott and managed by Spoff Himan. The route ahead of the Sheldenburger show is as follows:—Booneville, Indiana, Aug. 3d; Taylorsville, 4th; Jasper, 5th; Paoli, 7th; Salem, 8th; Vienna, 9th; Madison, 10th; Versailles, 11th; Manchester, 12th, and Lawrenceburg, 14th."

MRS. CHARLES WARNER wishes us to contradict the rumor that her show had broken up.

ROBSTON, SPRINGER AND HENDERSON'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE is billed to perform in Peoria and Decatur, Ill., Aug. 8th and 10th.

THE GREAT NATIONAL CIRCUS is billed to perform at Tottenville, Staten Island, August 14th; Port Richmond, 15th, and Stapleton, 16th.

KIT CLARKE is the business agent for Prince Sadi D'Jalma, and will, in future, make all his engagements.

VAN AMBURGH & CO'S Circus and Menagerie, Hyatt Frost, manager, exhibited at Princeton, Ind., Aug. 4th, and is billed to perform at Cynthiana, 7th; New Harmony, 8th; Mt. Vernon, 9th; Evansville, 10th; and Loonville, 12th.

JOHN ROBINSON'S Circus and Menagerie is billed to exhibit at Bloomington, Ill., on Aug. 15th, and Indianapolis, Ind., 23d.

FRANK PHELPS' Hippo-comique and Combination Troupe exhibited at Prattsburg, N. Y., August 3d.

HARDENBURGH & CO'S Circus and Menagerie exhibited at Owego, N. Y., July 31st; Waverly, Aug. 1st; Elmira 2d; and Corning, 3d.

MISS JOHN WOOD and the company from the St. James' Theatre, London, Eng., start upon a provincial tour, commencing at Portsmouth, Aug. 7th.

JOHN MORGAN, late stage manager of the Alexandra Theatre, died in London, Eng., July 16th, leaving a widow and six children, quite destitute. He had been connected with the Standard nearly twenty years previous to going to the Alexandra.

CHARLES DILLON acted in Leeds, Eng., July 16th and 17th.

FROM MELBOURNE, Australia, our advices, dated May 20th, state that at a recent benefit to George Coppin, he made a speech in which he intimated the end of the legitimate drama, and in questionable taste alluded to several engagements played by well known stars as having involved the management in loss, which drew forth several spicy letters from those artists who were then present in that city.

Musical.

AT THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, Covent Garden, London, Eng., on July 17th "Les Huguenots" was produced for the purpose of Adelina Patti's benefit, and allow Signor Fancelli to appear for the first time on the English stage. Her singing of the music was successful, but in the acting of the role she signally failed. On the 18th "Le Astuzie Femminili" was repeated. On the 19th Signor Mario took his farewell of the stage in "La Favorita." On the 20th "L'Etoile du Nord" was repeated. On the 21st "Faust" was performed, for the benefit of Mlle Sessi, and on the 22d the season closed with a performance of "Dinorah." At Her Majesty's Opera, Drury Lane Theatre, "Norma" was given on the 17th; "Rigoletto" on the 18th and 22d; "Robert le Diable" on the 20th. Mlle Marimon was announced as having perfectly recovered from her illness. The season was announced to close on August 24th.

MR. MAPLESON'S BENEFIT, which took place on July 19th, at the Crystal Palace, London, Eng., although the prices were high, was attended by over ten thousand people.

A REHEARSAL of the "Creation" was given at the Royal Albert Hall, London, Eng., July 17th, which attracted a large audience.

THE ST. JAMES THEATRE, London, Eng., is to be re-opened September 30th, with the Royal National Opera. The Misses Rose Hersee, Blanche Cole, Mme. Florence Lancia; Mr. George Perren, Mr. Nordblom, and Mr. Sims Reeves are engaged. Sir Julius Benedict will conduct his own opera, "The Lily of Killarney," in which Mr. Sims Reeves will play Miles na Coppaleen.

CARL TAUSIG, an eminent pianist, died at Leipsig, Germany, July 16th, whither he had gone from Berlin to meet his friend and teacher, Franz Liszt. He was born in Warsaw, Russia, and was the son of a music teacher. In early childhood he displayed such great musical talent that Liszt paid special attention to his full development. He resided in Flanders with Liszt during his childhood, and went afterward to Berlin and Paris. He married when very young a distinguished pianiste in Vienna and directed concerts there. He settled permanently in Berlin in 1865. His marriage was not a happy one and he separated from his wife, and ever after his life seemed clouded with a deep melancholy which he was unable to shake off. From his first public appearance his talent was fully acknowledged. He was appointed court pianist and founded a conservatoire for piano instruction, which was frequented by students from all parts of the world. His last and greatest musical work was the arranging of the piano score of Wagner's "Meistersinger." As virtuoso he assisted last in a charity concert with Mrs. Von Schleitz and then his concert with Miss Mehlig in Munich. It may be a disputed point to whom the palm of superiority should be awarded of the three piano virtuosi of the present day—Hans von Bulow, Anton Rubenstein or Carl Tausig.

Variety Halls.

VERY LITTLE CHANGE had occurred at the music halls in London, Eng., at the Hobora, George Leybourne was to have had a benefit on July 24th, with the following volunteer talent:—Hermann, the magician; Herr Holtum, cannon ball performer; Arthur and Bertrand, Fred French, Leggett and Allen, F. Mordaunt, P. Pollock, the brothers, Miss Kate Howorthe, the Sisters Tudor, Mlle. Delgrange, the Misses Kate Bella, L. Menkin and Lottie Walton..... Arthur Lloyd was to have received a farewell benefit at the Pavilion, July 27th.....The Rizerali brothers had achieved success at the Metropolitan, and were to have received a benefit on July 26th..... At Wilton's, the fresh arrivals were Laroche, comic; Herr and Mme. Golubecke, duetists; the Ritola family, acrobats, and Victor Liston, comic, who was announced to shortly depart for America.

JAMES JONES VAUGHN, better known as Jimmy Jones, one of the oldest comic singers living, but who had retired some years since, died at Leeds, Eng., July 16th, aged 59 years.

DICK CROWTHER, clog dancer, died at Paddock near Huddersfield, Eng., July 3d, aged 27 years.

HARRY RICKARDS, comic; Watty Walton and Nelly Hyde, duettists, were the fresh arrivals at the Museum Concert Hall, Bolton, Eng., during the week ending July 22d.

AT PULLAN MUSIC HALL, Bradford, Eng., the three brothers Avolo, the re-appearance of Orkins and Bell, negro vocalists, and Miss Bertha Ailey, were the chief attractions at our last advices.

AT THE VARIOUS HALLS in Liverpool, Eng., the fresh appearances may be found in the following summary:—At the new Star, Saphrini, female impersonator; the Lauris, Mons. Leon, and Miles. Ramsden, dancers.....At the Rotunda, Miss Clara Phelps, serio-comic, and the brothers Hall, duettists.....At the Adelphi, the brothers Fenland, gymnasts; the Ricardo family of acrobats; Mr. d'Alexandre, serio-comic, and Miss Constance, serio-comic.....At the Alhambra, Edgar Wilson, baritone; B. Thompson, character vocalist and dancer, and Murray and Lamb, duettists.....At the Oxford, Mr. and Mrs. Paddy Harrison.

Negro Minstrelsy.

MOORE AND BURGESS' CREOLITY MINSTRELS, from St. James' Hall, London, Eng., were announced to commence an engagement for a limited number of nights at the Standard Theatre in that city on Aug. 5th.

THE C. C. C. CREOLITY MINSTRELS performed at Stockton-on-Tees, Eng., July 17th and 18th.

BUTTERFIELD'S CREOLITY MINSTRELS performed at Swansea, Eng., during the entire week ending July 22d.

Circuses.

HOWES AND CUSHING'S CIRCUS performed in Blackburn, Eng., July 14th.....McCollum's Circus was still located at Bristol, Eng., Edmonds' menagerie exhibited in Chester, Eng., July 19th and 20th.....Cooke's Circus performed in Doncaster, Eng., July 14th.....At Hengler's Circus, Dublin, Ireland, "Maseppa" had given place to "Cinderella."..... Sesame's Circus continued at Edinburgh, Scotland..... Hutchinson and Bell's Circus exhibited at Ipswich, Eng., July 20th

JUST A SPECIMEN.
What the N. Y. Telegram, Aug. 2d, says:—
"Shin Fane, Mr. John F. Poole's latest drama, seems destined to create a sensation. Several competent judges, who have perused the manuscript, state that it is a play of remarkable interest, considerable literary merit, and excellent portraiture of character, while it contains several startling sensations, absolutely having no connection with railroads, but yet of a novel and exciting description. The drama has been written to suit the style of Mr. T. G. Riggs, who will appear in it at the Bowery Theatre on August 14th. Though the sensations are astounding, the drama can be played equally well without them—so it is said."
NOTE.
SOUTH BROOKLYN, June 18th, 1871.
MY DEAR RIGGS.—I send you the last act of "Shin Fane." Now that it is completed I can safely say, with an experience of twenty years as a dramatist, that it is the best piece I have ever written, and I know of no actor in America who can do as much justice to the part of Suil Gair as yourself. I stake my reputation on the drama as I do upon your acting of the leading part, knowing that both will prove "a hit, a palpable hit."
Yours and the public's,
JOHN F. POOLE.

TO MY FRIENDS.
I am happy to announce myself alive and in good health. Have traveled far and near since last we met, but find no better spot to live or die in than America, our land of the free. I shall now return to my profession with renewed life and energy. Trusting you will give me ever the same kind welcome as you so generously have done in days gone by. Your Humble Servant,

MISS MAJOR
PAULINE CUSHMAN,
SENSATIONAL ACTRESS,
KNOWN IN THE WAR OF THE REBELLION AS THE
SCOUT OF THE CUMBERLAND.
Having just returned from Europe, is now ready to negotiate for Star Engagements with first-class managers from Oct. 1st, 1871, for the ensuing season. She has in her repertoire many attractive pieces of the sensational order, including several new specialities written expressly for her, and a Wardrobe surpassing anything upon the American Stage.
Address PAULINE CUSHMAN,
CUSHMAN COTTAGE, HYDE PARK,
COOK COUNTY, ILL.
P. S.—Managers on the Pacific coast, let me hear from you.

WANTED.—A first-class Agent, thoroughly acquainted with the Western States, Territories and the other side of the Continent.
18-2t Address as above.

NUNNEMACHER'S GRAND OPERA HOUSE,
MILWAUKEE, WIS.
HERM. NUNNEMACHER.....PROPRIETOR.
This magnificent temple, erected especially for the production of operatic and dramatic entertainments, is situated on the corner of Oneida, East Water and River streets, covering one entire block, has THREE CONVENIENT ENTRANCES; located directly in the centre of a city with 100,000 inhabitants. It is ENTIRELY FIRE PROOF and THE ONLY THEATRE IN MILWAUKEE.
Will open about the first of August, 1871. The seating capacity of this house is 1,400; six private boxes, parquette and dress circle, balcony and family circle, upper tier and gallery. Furnished with the latest improved OPERA CHAIRS, plush backs, seats, sides and arms, so that for COMFORT AND ELEGANCE it has no superior in the United States. The auditorium is lighted from the dome by a brilliant crystal prismatic reflecting chandelier, TEN FEET IN DIAMETER, WITH SIX HUNDRED BURNERS. The stage, which is 35x60, is furnished with three rows of footlights, border and ground lights, a full and splendid set of scenery, a set of modern improved wood traps; has plenty of head room under the stage. Ladies' retiring room, dressing rooms and green room furnished with every modern convenience. In short, it is perfect in every respect. Applications from all FIRST CLASS organizations moving westward are respectfully invited. Dates open from the 14th of August. (17-3t*) JOSEPH C. WALLACE, Manager.

ANOTHER SENSATION
BY HOWARD,
ENTITLED
"GOOD ENOUGH!!!"
Far excelling his famous songs of "Shoo Fly," and "Let Me Be." What suggested this great song and dance, "Howard, you've written 'Shoo Fly' and 'Let Me Be,' two of the greatest sensations ever known; call your next 'Good Enough,' after my old saying, and with your music it will be good enough for any body."
Ask simply for the song and dance,
GOOD ENOUGH,
Written and composed by ROLLIN HOWARD. Price 30 cents.
